

Vietnam vets out of step with VFW, Legion

By Robert Lindsey
New York Times Service

When Tom Ambrose of Los Angeles came home from Vietnam he joined the American Legion, following a path paved by millions of veterans since World War I.

But after a year he quit.

"Vietnam veterans and the traditional veterans' organization are a generation apart on policy, philosophy and organizational structure," Ambrose said. "They're full of formations, salutes and military protocol, all the things young people disliked in Vietnam and want to forget."

His statement exemplifies a problem bedeviling the nation's veterans' organizations on Veterans Day: The men who fought in Vietnam are, for the most part, turning them off.

Despite a pool of 8.3 million veterans from the Vietnam period, membership in the American Legion has remained level at about 2.7 million since 1970.

While the second major veterans' organization, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has been somewhat more successful in enrolling Vietnam veterans, its membership has been stable for more than three years at 1.8 million. And, like the Legion, most of its recent recruiting has done little more than keep up with the deaths of older veterans.

"We have a generation gap," said Peter Tetley, commander of an American Legion post in Colorado Springs. "The older members from World War II say they did more for their country than the Vietnam veterans. They seem to think 'their war' was more important, that their comradeship and patriotism was greater."

Age is not the only gap between the veterans.

Interviews last week with veterans and officers of veterans' organizations in 15 cities and rural communities around the country indicated there is also gap of values, perhaps related to the experience in Vietnam, on subjects ranging from the use of drugs to the America-right-or-wrong patriotic fervor that has historically been part of the credo of veterans' organizations.

"The Vietnam vet has been shafted, more so than any other group of veterans," asserted Thomas L. Smith, a veteran of the Korean War who belongs to a VFW post in Delaware. "They want no contest whatsoever with anything military, because of their bitterness."

Samuel Israel, a Vietnam veteran in Miami, summed up what appeared to be the attitude toward traditional organizations that is held by many ex-soldiers of his generation: "They're mostly just a bunch of old men who sit around and talk about the war they were in, and how many people they killed; I don't want to talk about it."

In countless towns across America, the local American Legion post or VFW clubhouse is a major social center — in some towns it is the only place to buy a drink or play poker for money.

In turn, officials of veterans' organizations maintain that the Vietnam era veterans will eventually decide to join, don one of the Train carrying dynamite explodes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thirty tons of dynamite aboard a parked freight train exploded Friday night, killing at least 48 persons and injuring 1,280 others in the city of Iri, authorities reported.

The thunderous blast at the railroad station ripped the roof off a nearby theater where 700 persons were listening to a Korean singer. Rescue workers reported finding 15 bodies in the theater and police said they feared the death toll would climb as the search continued in the city 120 miles south of Seoul.

About 9,500 buildings — nearly 40 percent of all buildings in the city of 120,000 — were destroyed or damaged, police said. In Seoul, the government set aside the equivalent of $10 million to aid reconstruction.

The explosion was heard for a distance of 10 miles and carved a crater 60 feet deep.

Police said fires touched off by the blast at 9 p.m. (4 a.m. PST) were brought under control after two hours with the help of fire crews sent in from two adjacent cities.

Power and water supplies were disrupted by the blast, which was one of South Korea's worst railway disasters.

Iri is a railroad hub in southwestern Korea and rail service south of the city was suspended.

Witnesses said the explosion occurred a few minutes after a man ran from a freight car screaming: "Fire, fire."

Police later identified the man as Shin Moo-II, 36, and said he told them he saw flames in the ceiling of a freight car carrying dynamite and other chemicals. They reported Shin had been assigned by the Korea Explosives Co. of Incheon, 20 miles west of Seoul, to supervise transportation of the dynamite from Incheon to Kwangju, 60 miles south of Iri.

All hospitals and clinics in Iri were filled with victims of the explosion and many casualties had to be sent to nearby towns for treatment.

Preliminary police estimates put property losses at $10 million and indicated 10,000 persons were directly affected, including many who lost their homes.

Three hundred doctors and medics and 1,000 soldiers were dispatched to Iri to assist in rescue operations and the education ministry ordered 32 primary and high schools closed temporarily.

Dramatic peace plea by Begin

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin appealed directly to the Egyptian people Friday to end bloodshed and "start on the road to friendship."

The extraordinary, handwritten plea came amid fresh fighting on Israel's border with Lebanon and reports of more casualties and the downing of an Israeli jet. Israel denied any jet was downed, however.

Begin's statement, addressed to the "citizens of Egypt," appeared to be a spontaneous reply to a speech by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who offered Wednesday to ignore the technicalities blocking peace talks and go anywhere, even to the Israeli parliament, to negotiate.

ment carried on Cairo TV said. "This is the only way to make the Arab people believe his talks on peace and respond to them because peace cannot be achieved through occupation of lands and neglecting the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Egypt accused Begin of trying to divide the Arabs because he "limited his appeal to the Egyptian people while he knows that they are part of the Arab world and had never been alone in their wars against Zionist expansionist designs."

The Israeli military command said, meanwhile, that two air force planes, sent to patrol southern Lebanon after a Palestinian rocket attack, encountered anti-aircraft fire from a grove near the Mediterranean town of Tyre, 12 miles north of the border. The planes attacked the source of fire and returned safely to base, a spokesman said. He said the firing was from an inhabited area.

However, Palestinians in southern Lebanon claimed a new Israeli

"LET US SAY one to another, and let it be a silent oath by both peoples, of Egypt and Israel: no more wars, no more bloodshed and no more threats," Begin said.

In response, Egypt challenged Begin to prove his sincerity by withdrawing Israeli troops from occupied Arab lands.

L.A. may get more mental health cash

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday he would propose increased state spending on local mental health programs in Los Angeles County.

He also said he may propose lengthening the time a mental patient can be hospitalized involuntarily.

The governor disputed a claim by Assemblyman Frank Lantieri, R-La Canada, that Brown's veto of $4 million from the Legislature's mental hospital budget last year had contributed to deteriorating conditions at Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk.

"The two had nothing to do with each other," Brown said, noting that he increased the hospital budget by slightly more than the vetoed $4 million later in the year.

The Legislature added $10 million to Brown's budget for staffing in the 11 hospitals in 1976-77. Brown approved only $6 million. Later in the year he added more than $4 million to start to bring the hospitals up to staffing standards approved in 1973.

Brown had opposed the 1973 standards earlier, and still says they are not completely appropriate for the hospitals. But he agreed to add the money amid continuing reports of unexplained deaths, patient abuse, inadequate staffing and poor care at the hospitals.

This year, Brown's Finance Department says, the state budget includes $20.7 million to increase hospital staffing.

Brown said he vetoed the $4 million at the time because the hospitals did not yet have adequate plans to use the additional staff, and because he "did not have a lot of confidence" in Metropolitan's mental health director or in several other hospital directors in the state. Later in the year a number of directors were replaced.

Brown said Friday that he would announce on Tuesday a proposal for "additional resources for Los Angeles County" for local mental health institutions and non-institutional follow-up care.

Mendelsohn out as Calif. sues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nomination of Robert Mendelsohn to a high Interior Department post was withdrawn Friday after a California agency announced plans to sue him in connection with an alleged scheme to launder campaign funds.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus announced the withdrawal of the nomination and said it was at Mendelsohn's request.

The California Fair Political Practices Commission said it planned to file suit against Mendelsohn on Monday alleging "widespread violations of California's campaign disclosure laws."

Andrus said he felt certain Mendelsohn would be exonerated and he would resubmit Mendelsohn's name at that time.

In a statement issued through the Interior Department, Mendelsohn said the action by the California agency was "wrong and totally unjust."

Mendelsohn was nominated to be undersecretary of Interior for policy, budget and administration.

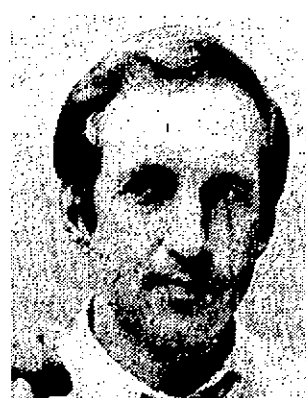

Mendelsohn is accused of being negligent in supervising the reporting activities of his 1974 campaign committee. He ran unsuccessfully for state controller.

The California commission said it planned to file the suit against Mendelsohn, his campaign committee and five other individuals.

"We have uncovered what we believe to be very serious violations of the campaign disclosure law," commission chairman Daniel Lowenstein told a news conference.

The commission said $26,500 was funneled into Mendelsohn's unsuccessful campaign for state controller and that "a conspiracy to cover up the true source of the money still exists."

Southland plants get exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a major concession to Southern California and other smoggy regions, Senate-House energy conferees agreed Friday to exempt power plants in such areas from a ban on the burning of oil or natural gas.

The conference committee drafting a compromise national energy bill voted Friday to require most power plants to convert to coal fuel by 1990, which could send electricity bills soaring in affected areas.

Converting these plants to coal could cost utilities as much as $45 billion, according to White House and congressional estimates. And this cost will be passed along to consumers in higher electric bills.

Some cuts due next year Carter tax plan delay is seen

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter will propose tax cuts for individuals and business next year, but probably not the comprehensive tax reform program he promised during his campaign, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal predicted Friday.

He said Carter will decide within a few weeks on the tax bill he will send to Congress early next year. But Blumenthal said he hopes it will not include "long and complicated" tax changes because they would have an unsettling effect on the economy.

"My advice is that tax action next year be relatively simple so that we get . . . confidence built within the business and financial community and do something to provide tax relief for individuals and incentives for business," Blumenthal said.

"That should be the first priority, and I think it will be."

While Blumenthal didn't mention tax cut figures during his appearance before the Senate Banking Committee, he has said previously the administration is considering tax reductions of between $15 billion and $20 billion next year for business and individuals.

He said a start could be made on tax reform. However, if the administration decides to keep the tax bill simple next year, it probably would not include Carter's previous pledges to eliminate tax preferences on capital gains and deductions for business lunches.

The plan to reduce the double taxation of corporate dividends probably also would be eliminated.

Carter said at his news conference Thursday that he had not yet made any final decisions on what to include in the tax bill.

THOR HEYERDAHL examines the reed boat Tigris, which was floated Friday in Iraq's Tigris River. Sometime next week, the 63-year-old Norwegian and his crew will set sail to points unknown in an effort to demonstrate the sea-going capacity of early Sumerians.

Miss Lillian ill

President Carter's 79-year-old mother became ill Friday in Dublin, Ireland, and canceled her engagements for the rest of the day.

"She's caught a chill," Tim Ryan, her host during an unofficial goodwill visit with a group of Iowans, told reporters.

Aides said Miss Lillian had gone to bed after being drenched during a tree-planting ceremony in a Dublin park.

Her bodyguard, Georgia state trooper George Hatcher, said, "It's not really a cold. She's hoarse and has a sore throat and since she has a TV talk show on for tomorrow night she thought she'd better stay home. She's in bed resting."

There was no indication that a doctor had been called in. Her companion, Martha Dixon, went to a fashion show that was the only engagement scheduled for Friday evening.

Skater in hospital

Olympic gold medalist Dorothy Hamill has been hospitalized in Los Angeles with an acute intestinal disorder, her spokesman said Friday.

However, the 21-year-old figure skater is in "good spirits" and should be released within a week. Her doctor diagnosed the problem as acute gastro-enteritis. She was admitted to the hospital Thursday.

Miss Hamill is under a two-year contract with the Ice Capades. She plans to rejoin the show in Oakland on Nov. 22.

Pryor improving

Comedian Richard Pryor is "in very good condition and he will be released in a few days," a Methodist Medical Center spokesman in Peoria, Ill., said Friday.

Spokesman Roger Monroe said Pryor, 36, "is in great shape" after suffering what his grandmother said was a heart attack.

Thor's new 'ancient' craft afloat

Combined News Services

Thor Heyerdahl's replica of an ancient Sumerian reed boat was launched on the Tigris River Friday near Qurna, Iraq, after briefly bogging down in mud of the biblical Garden of Eden. It's expected to sail next week into the Arabian Sea and then the Indian Ocean.

No definite route has been given for the craft's voyage.

Plagued by a malfunctioning ratchet winch, Iraqi workmen took 3½ hours to move the 30-ton Tigris from its building rack to the river's edge 20 yards away near the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

The gracefully curved bow nosed into the water. But the stern became stuck in mud as thunder rumbled through a darkening sky and rain began to fall.

Rising estuary tides finally floated the stern and a cheer went up from a crowd of about 2,000 onlookers.

Ihsan Samarraei, director of the nearby Basra television station, poured river water over the bow and christened the vessel. A lamb was ceremonially slaughtered for the occasion.

"I don't want to prove anything in particular," Heyerdahl, a Norwegian explorer-scientist famed for his Pacific ocean voyage on the raft Kon-Tiki, said at the ceremony.

"I just want to find out if the early people of Mesopotamia (present-day Iraq) were able to travel by sea and influence primitive cultures in other areas."

Heyerdahl refused to commit himself on a sailing date. But one source here estimated that the reed boat would be ready for sailing in about five days.

The mast still has to be erected and the sails unfurled. When it is fully loaded with supplies, the boat will weigh about 40 tons.

The voyage is being financed by an international television consortium comprised of U.S. Public Television, the British Broadcasting Co., West German, Swedish, French and Japanese television and the National Geographic Society of the United States.

The Tigris is sailing under United Nations colors. It also was docked at launching with small flags of the nine nations contributing crew members — Norway, the United States, the Soviet Union, Italy, West Germany, Japan, Mexico, Denmark and Iraq.

The 11-man crew ranges in age from 20 to 63 and includes a physician, three students, a mountain climber and several professional photographers, but only one professional seaman — Detlef Soitzek, a 26-year-old West German who is licensed to skipper freighters.

For Heyerdahl, 63, the voyage is his fourth aboard a primitive raft. The modern-day Viking first gained fame when he crossed the Pacific in the Kon-Tiki 30 years ago, and in 1969-70 he made two Atlantic expeditions in the papyrus boats Ra I and Ra II.

Pot find in princes' school leads to student expulsions

Five boys and a girl were expelled from exclusive Gordonstoun School in Scotland for allegedly having some marijuana, the headmaster said Friday.

The two youngest sons of Queen Elizabeth II are students at Gordonstoun, but a Buckingham Palace spokesman said Prince Andrew, 17, and Prince Edward, 13, were not involved.

"The headmaster was aware that there was some question of drugs being passed around the school," the spokesman said. "He sought the advice of the princes' private detective because the officer is a resident at the school."

"The two men discussed the matter and as a result of an investigation the children concerned were expelled."

Prince Philip, the queen's husband, and Prince Charles who is heir to the British throne, are former pupils of the private school that is noted for its discipline and stress on character training.

The headmaster, John Kempe, said, "Some boys and a girl have been told to leave after a minimal amount of cannabis was found."

"I have told everybody that there will be no drugs in the school and that anyone found with it, or who passes it on, would be told to leave. I can make no comment on the names of those involved."

Nader 'divorce'

"Poppycock," replied Rep. P. Schroeder when accused by consumer advocate Ralph Nader of abandoning the interests of American consumers just so she could attract campaign contributions from businessmen.

Nader made the accusation at a press conference in Denver Thursday, saying the Colorado Democrat's recent announcement she won't support a pending consumer bill in the House was a "philosophical change."

Nader said the bill was "the most important piece of consumer legislation in the past decade," but the congresswoman said it would do more harm than good.

"He really thinks I ought to be in his pocket," Mrs. Schroeder said.

"After five years (of generally supporting Nader positions) I don't agree with him on consumer protection and he wants a divorce."

'Exercise queen'

Debbie Drake, the television exercise queen who taught a generation of Americans to loosen up, says she's falling apart.

"I'm a wreck," she said recently at her $200,000 home in Englewood, Colo., a Denver suburb. A divorce from her husband of 15 years and a drawn-out custody battle for their daughter Tammy has taken its toll, she said.

Jack Eiteljorg has had temporary custody of Tammy, 19, since the couple separated in January. He says his wife is an unfit mother. The 43-year-old Miss Drake says the pain has made her virtually unable to function.

Nor will she do an exercise program to have been shown during breaks on television movies because she didn't want the public to see her as she is now.

"I've spent a long time telling people how to handle stress, but I can't handle it now," she said.

CANAL ZONE, Panama — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd says it will help the cause of the proposed Panama Canal treaty if Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos signs a memorandum of understanding on U.S. rights to defend the waterway. But Byrd said he did not know whether putting actual signatures to the document, which was issued last month after a meeting between Torrijos and President Carter, was crucial to ratification of the canal treaty by the Senate next year.

Gulf Oil pays big fine

WASHINGTON — Gulf Oil Corp. was fined $229,500 Friday by the federal government for failing to report currency transfers involving millions of dollars brought into the country to make illegal campaign contributions to Richard Nixon and numerous members of Congress. The fine, largest levied under the five-year-old Bank Secrecy Act, was paid by Gulf "without admitting liability," a company spokesman said. Corporations are required to report any currency transfers of more than $10,000 within the United States and of more than $5,000 between the United States and overseas. Gulf had previously admitted that thousands of dollars were "laundered" through a Bahamian company to make illegal campaign contributions in the United States.

Jobs bill preview

WASHINGTON — Sponsors of full-employment legislation say a compromise bill will make important changes in the way the government plans economic policies even if it won't mandate new programs to provide jobs. The proposal sets a target of reducing unemployment to 4 percent overall by 1983 and cutting joblessness among adult workers to 3 percent. President Carter told a news conference Thursday he expects to endorse a compromise Humphrey-Hawkins bill within a few days. The bill declares priorities and establishes goals and complicated planning mechanisms to see that the targets are pursued.

Gambling equipment rental plea stirs L.B. concern

By Robert Gore
Staff Writer

A South Gate gaming entrepreneur is asking Long Beach authorities to license his gambling equipment rental business, prompting concern among city officials.

"The gambling equipment, along with 'professional dealers,' would be rented to community groups and conventions running gambling functions usually billed as Las Vegas nights, according to an application on file with the city Business License Division.

City aides say they are wary of any enterprise involving such equipment after several years of legal battles with gambling games.

The city attorney and city prosecutor disagree over where fun stops and gambling begins. The police chief has already given his approval to the rental business.

Louis H. Kelly, owner of Casino de Paris, 9636 Long Beach Blvd., filed the application and definitely expects to get a business license, he said.

Much of the concern centers around the apparent split between City Attorney Leonard Putnam and City Prosecutor Robert Parkin.

Police Chief Carl Calkins, in a letter on file with Kelly's application, advised Kelly that the special police-regulated business license would be issued.

Calkins was relying on an opinion from Parkin that the rentals and Las Vegas nights are legal.

There are two types of Las Vegas nights. At one, the gamblers play for fun or charity — there is no reward.

The second kind permits those who win the most chips to pick door prizes. This is where the city attorney and prosecutor disagree.

"As long as the participants are playing with tokens that have no value," Parkin said, "the Las Vegas nights are fine." He also noted that it is no longer against the law to possess gambling equipment.

Parkin said the tokens must be made available without charge, although a donation can be requested. The tokens can be redeemed for prizes, he said.

However, Putnam said, "I would say redeeming chips for a door prize immediately gives the chips a value and that makes it gambling."

Two deputies in Putnam's office, David Schacter and John Calhoun, are reviewing the details of Kelly's operation and Las Vegas nights, Putnam said, and they will have an opinion available next week.

Assistant City Manager Robert Creighton asked for Putnam's opinion on Thursday when Creighton became aware that Calkins had approved the business license.

"I would expect the police to monitor any known Las Vegas night," Putnam said. "They can get out of hand very easily. People start playing with real money and that type of thing."

Calkins' cautiously phrased letter advised Kelly that he could rent his dealers and equipment, but must be sure the organization running the Las Vegas night obtained the proper police permit.

Rental equipment available includes roulette wheels, crap tables, blackjack tables and chuck-a-luck cages.

A charitable or philanthropic group merely needs a special business license, according to administrative investigation Detective Frederick Millemann.

A profit-making group first must apply for a special permit with the police bureau detail before getting a business license, Millemann said.

Kelly, contacted at his South Gate office, said he has been supplying equipment and dealers to parties for five years as Casino de Paris.

He said he had a party lined up for the Queenway Hilton on Oct. 12. Parkin wrote the sponsors, advising them to cancel it.

Parkin said the group, a regional security officers association, was going to charge cash for the chips, which is gambling.

Another Las Vegas night, this one on board a harbor cruise ship, was also called off at Parkin's request, Kelly said, although he doubted the legality of the city's actions.

Several large (1,000 people) events are lined up for the Queen Mary, Kelly said, but they may be cancelled if he does not get his business license.

Kelly applied for a business license after the Queenway Hilton affair was canceled in early October. He said he had rented equipment, but no dealers, in Long Beach before that party.

Heart fund

What does the Heart Association do with all its money? I think they should be helping children with heart problems, the ones who need it most. C.M., Long Beach.

The Long Beach Heart Association, 2242 Long Beach Blvd., took in $317,852 and spent $246,649 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1976, the latest figures available from the California Registry of Charitable Trusts. The income was from local fund-raising drives and events and included $86,327 in legacies and bequests.

Of the expenses, $15,639 went as salary to local executive director Marion Bach and the rest of the $36,008 salary allocation to a fund drive director, clerical and bookkeeping employees and others including a part-time recreation therapist. Other office expenses including printing and postage totalled $50,496.

Expenditures for services included $48,151 to local heart research projects and paramedic CPR training, $13,407 in community service grants including operating a Stroke Activity Center in Long Beach, $16,734 to the California Heart Association and $55,779 to the American Heart Association. A spokesman for the latter organization said it took in $16,975,863 that year with 57 percent going to research programs in addition to expenditures for national advertising, public health education and community programs.

The local association carried over a $71,203 surplus which gave it assets of $695,000 and liabilities of $76,000 at the end of that fiscal year. All the affiliated Heart Associations in the nation took in $70,497,784 in 1976 and spent $65,008,039 including $48,855,782 for program services.

Fasting

I have heard of fasting clubs and sanitariums, but I can't find the name of one. I would appreciate any information you could give me. J.R.B., Long Beach.

We could not find any clubs devoted exclusively to fasting. However, you might find others who share your interest at the Institute of Yogic Culture, 16575 Pacific Coast Highway, Sunset Beach. They teach yoga, nutrition and juice fasting. You can call them at 592-5061 for information.

Dr. Paavo Airola, a biochemist who is director of the International Academy of Biological Medicine in Phoenix, Ariz., conducts fasting workshops each summer. To be placed on the mailing list to receive next summer's workshop schedule, you can write to the Academy at P.O. Box 31313, Phoenix, Ariz. 85046. Dr. Airola said as many as 60 persons attend each workshop and go on a carefully supervised juice fast for about 10 days.

Recycling

Is there a local recycling center where we can get cash for glass containers and magazines? E.S., Long Beach.

The Coastal Scrap & Paper Co., 1404 Hayes Ave., will buy old magazines for $16 a ton or will pay $21 a ton for a mixed load of newspapers and magazines that contains no more than 30 percent of the latter. The firm is open Mondays through Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

The only places we could find that will pay for recycled glass containers are Kerr Glass Inc., 1221 E. St. Andrew Place, Santa Ana, and the Latchford Glass Co., 7537 Marbrisa Ave., Huntington Park. The latter firm's recycling center, however, will be shut down for about the next five weeks.

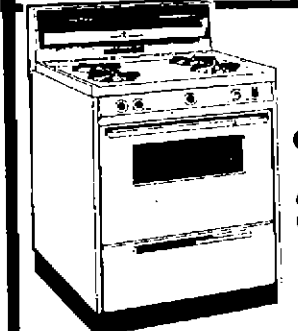

Kerr pays 1 cent each for clear glass containers and 3/4 cent each for colored ones. Latchford pays 1 1/2 cents per pound for any color. You can take your glass containers to Kerr Tuesdays, Thursdays or Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Latchford's hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The containers must be separated by color and placed in paper sacks or cardboard boxes, not plastic bags.

You can take aluminum cans to the Reynolds Aluminum Co.'s recycling station at 2001 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; to the Triangle Distributing Co., 17720 Studebaker Road, Cerritos, Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.; or to Shoreline Beverage Distributors Inc., 19618 S. Susana Road, Compton, weekdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. These firms pay 17 cents per pound.

Newspapers can be taken to the Independent Paper Stock Co., 2485 E. 68th St., which pays $30 a ton, weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon; or to the Davis Paper Stock Co., 3375 Pixie Ave., Lakewood, which pays $25 a ton, Mondays and Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For those who aren't interested in being paid for the items they recycle, they can take them to Long Beach State University's recycling center, which accepts glass, newspapers, tin cans and aluminum containers. The center is located in the university's northwest parking lot off Atherton Street. The city of Seal Beach also maintains a newspaper recycling bin in the Safeway Market parking lot, 1101 Pacific Coast Highway. Both centers are open 24 hours a day.

housed Japanese-Americans during World War II. It has all but disappeared.

Wartime Manzanar relocation center is now 'just a memory'

MANZANAR (AP) — During World War II, this was a Japanese internment camp and the biggest city on U.S. 395 between Los Angeles and Reno. Now, 32 years after its close, little remains but its memory.

Manzanar, which officially closed Nov. 21, 1945 following Japan's surrender, was the first of 10 inland camps which held about 110,000 persons of Japanese ancestry during the war. More than 10,000 such persons called this high desert camp home.

Todd Watkins, whose

Challant Press Publications, operating in Inyo and Mono counties, put out the camp paper during the war, says that in retrospect the camps were a good idea.

The camps were set up following then-President Roosevelt's 1942 order giving the War Department power to define military areas in the West and exclude from them anyone who might threaten the war effort.

There were complaints that internees were forced from their homes in coastal areas and upon their release found that they had to start from scratch. But Watkins adds "these people had to be protected from war hysteria."

"The people who came to Manzanar probably had it better than anyone else."

It was basically a happy place," Watkins says. "Some were disgruntled, but many more were glad to be here. They had a great fear of someone gunning them down and they felt more secure."

Manzanar once consisted of barracks, guard towers, mess halls, shower rooms, a hospital, gymnasium and even tea gardens.

Mrs. Houston said in her book, co-authored by her husband James, that Manzanar became "a totally equipped American small town, complete with schools, churches, Boy Scouts, beauty parlors, neighborhood gossip, fire and police departments, glee clubs, softball games, Abbott and Costello movies, tennis courts and traveling shows."

Now all that remains are parts of the orchard from which Manzanar got its name (Spanish for apple orchard), a small graveyard, a shrine and a plaque at the old entrance to the camp, both put up since by Japanese groups.

The old gymnasium at the camp, located in the Owens Valley between Lone Pine and Independence, has been taken over by the Inyo County road department to store and maintain equipment.

Japanese people who were interned at the camp still return here occasionally. Hundreds showed up earlier this year for a dedication ceremony.

Marijuana test may reveal if driver 'one toke over line'

Associated Press

Law enforcement officers will soon be able to test drivers who are "one toke over the line" as easily as they now can test them for one drink too many, researchers said Friday.

A research team at White Memorial Medical Center in Los Angeles already have developed a speedy laboratory test for marijuana levels in the blood and are attempting to refine the test further so it could be used by police at the roadside, just as the "breathalyzer" currently is used for on-the-scene determination of alcohol intoxication.

Elsewhere in Los Angeles, medical experts at the Southern California Research Institute have been studying the effects of marijuana use on various activities, including driving, in work that could form the basis for laws specifying how much or little a motorist could smoke without being legally unfit to operate a vehicle.

"What we've developed is a radioimmuno assay for THC, the active ingredient in marijuana,"

Dr. Jim Soares of White Memorial explained. "It will tell you how much is in the bloodstream and allows easy processing of large numbers of samples."

Soares said the test developed by him and Dr. Stanley Gross works this way: THC molecules are chemically altered so that they generate antibodies when injected into animals. The antibodies are then extracted and chemically bonded with radioactive THC. The mixture is added to the driver's blood sample and a constant percentage of antibodies transfers to the nonradioactive THC in his blood, allowing technicians to measure how much THC was in the sample.

"At the moment, it's a test that has to be done in the lab, but it's one that conceivably could be refined into a roadside test," perhaps in three to five years, Soares said. The equipment is now too bulky to be transported in a squad car, but its size can be reduced, he said.

"That sort of (road) test could certainly be useful," one California Highway Patrol officer said. Even the lab tests will help, he said. "Our roadside breath tests for alcohol still have to be backed up by lab tests."

Gross began work on the test six years ago. Soares joined him a year later. Their research is funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

NIDA also funds parallel research at the Southern California Research Institute. Dr. Satnam Sharma, who with Dr. Herbert Moskowitz has been studying the effects of marijuana use since 1971, commented: "This is the sort of thing that will be necessary before it can be legalized, so that legal limits can be set for the amount you can have in your system when driving."

Even with marijuana use reduced to a misdemeanor in several states, there is a need for such standards, Sharma said.

Japan steel costing jobs

Associated Press

Importing of low-priced Japanese steel is costing Californians more than 100,000 jobs, state Sen. Bill Greene, D-Los Angeles, said Friday.

Greene told the U.S. International Trade Commission, which is conducting hearings on steel imports, that foreign competition has caused the closing of six major steel plants in the state.

Women's convention vows to step up Nevada boycott

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's National Organization for Women began its state convention Friday, vowing to push for the election of more women and step up boycott pressure on Nevada to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We're going to escalate economic sanctions" against Nevada and other states that have not ratified the ERA, spokeswoman Shelley Mandell told reporters.

She said Las Vegas and convention cities in other states are being hurt by the refusal of an increasing number of groups to hold conventions in unrattifying states.

Linda Dishman, co-chairwoman of NOW's state legislative task force, said she is confident Congress will agree to extend the deadline for ERA ratification another seven years to March 1986.

The ERA would ban discrimination based on sex. It has been ratified by legislatures in 35 states and needs three more by March 1979 to become part of the Constitution.

Ms. Mandell also said NOW began making political endorsements last year and will start putting money into legislative and congressional campaigns next year. She didn't say how much money the group planned to spend.

"All our chapters will be swamped next year by candidates seeking endorsements," she predicted.

NOW, the state's largest feminist group, estimates its membership in California at 15,000. It was formed in 1966 nationally, and the weekend meeting is its sixth annual state conference.

Ms. Dishman said the weekend meeting is taking place at a time of "erosion of rights" for women, including the cutoff of federal funds for abortions and the ERA's difficulties.

The state group has its own problems. While leaders are talking of political fund-raising, NOW's chief legislative lobbyist, Geri Sherwood, is quitting, at least in part because the group has not allocated a full-time lobbyist's salary.

In addition, an economic boycott against Nevada, announced about a year ago, has amounted to little more than endorsement of the nationwide convention boycott.

Ms. Mandell cited a report in Time magazine about effectiveness of the boycott against Nevada.

The magazine said this week that the American Home Economics Association, National Education Association, National Lawyers Guild and Democratic National Committee are among groups abiding by the boycott against non-ERA states.

Invalid left all alone after murder wants to go home

Associated Press

Imre Robitsek of Los Angeles was thrown by the Halloween night murder of his grandfather into a world of strangers. The killing left the 33-year-old Robitsek, a helpless victim of cerebral palsy, without relatives to care for him.

Now, though he is alone, he says he wants to leave the Spastic Children's Foundation, where he's been staying for two weeks, and go home. Authorities don't know if Robitsek can make it on his own.

He was taken to the foundation after the murder because police didn't know what else to do with him. He has passed the time writing poems and trying to remain, in his words, "cool, calm and collected."

His grandfather was buried Friday at a local cemetery.

"He has a couple of great dancin' in the dog pound and he'd like to get them out," said Bill Johnson, administrator of the foundation. "He has an attachment to them and he'd like to go home. He misses them."

"He's quite a poet and artist, he has full mental capacities," although his speech is impaired, Johnson said. "But he's in a wheelchair and requires care."

Police still are looking for the man who, wearing a Halloween mask, bound and beat Robitsek and his grandfather, then killed the elder man and ran away.

"We're acting as his custodian while police continue their investigation," Johnson said. "I don't know how long we will keep him."

Johnson said Robitsek never before had been institutionalized and is anxious to leave, but "he does need some degree of assistance with his daily needs. He's very intelligent, but he needs care."

Robitsek told police his parents were dead and that he had been cared for by a grandmother until she died two years ago, leaving him only his grandfather. "He's being stoic," says his case worker, who asked that her name be withheld. "He's always saying he wants to stay 'Cool, calm and collected.' He doesn't like to make any impositions on people."

She said some friends of Robitsek's grandfather have suggested a trust fund for young Robitsek's care, but there is nothing firm yet. And Robitsek still wants to go home.

"I'm just wondering what he's doing with all those feelings," she says. "He's had many losses and he's all alone."

Veterans' parade

Honor Medal
heroes saluted

SAN JOSE (AP) — Five thousand persons lined the streets Friday for a Veterans' Day parade honoring a gathering of heroes, 167 men who have been awarded the highest honor for valor — the Medal of Honor.

One of the most notable medal recipients on the reviewing stand was retired Gen. James H. Doolittle, who led the first bombing raid on Japan in World War II.

The 81-year-old general, now living in Santa Monica, was asked what were his fond memories of the war years.

"There are no fond memories of war," Doolittle replied.

Does he consider himself a hero?

"No. I had a job to do, and I did it the best that I knew how."

He also suggested it was unfair for him to be the only one from the flight of 16 B-25 bombers to receive the medal.

"We all took the same risks, and I didn't deserve it any more than any other man on the mission," said Doolittle.

But he said the medal has fostered a greater degree of patriotism and heroism. He recalled that once the late Gen. George C. Patton, "in my opinion the finest leader of men in history, put his arm on my shoulder and said, 'Jimmy, I'd give my life for that little piece of blue ribbon.'"

Also on hand Friday was Phil C. Katz, 89, of San Francisco, the second oldest medal recipient, who is still active physically. He was honored for ignoring German machine-gun fire to pull a wounded buddy to safety in a trench in France during World War I.

The oldest recipient, William Seache, is hospitalized. Seache, nearing his 100th birthday, received the medal for heroism in the Boxer Rebellion in China during 1900.

There are 286 living recipients of the medal, which originated during the Civil War. While at one time it was presented by Abraham Lincoln to hundreds of Union soldiers for merely re-enlisting, since the turn of the century it has been reserved for a person who "distinguished himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty."

Recipients also receive a lifetime special pension of $100 per month, and their children can enroll in any military academy of their choice.

Nude man attacks 2 autos with plastic club

A naked man who caused $3,000 damage to two cars Friday by wielding an 8-foot section of plastic as a club was taken to Metropolitan State Hospital for observation, Long Beach police said.

Police said the rampage started shortly before 6 a.m. the man — identified as Larry Tate, 27, a transient — tried to break into an auto in the 700 block of Elm Avenue, battering it with the hard plastic sheath normally used to cover guide-support wires on telephone poles.

Police said Tate is about five-foot, six-inches tall and weighs 135 pounds.

He moved on to 10th Street and Elm Avenue, according to police, where he attacked another car — this one with a woman inside who locked the doors.

As Tate was battering this auto, a passer-by, 53-year-old Mike Pezak, of Long Beach, grabbed and lussed with him. Tate struck Pezak on the head with the club and fled into the parking lot at St. Mary Medical Center.

There, police said, he attacked the automatic gate at the lot and battered out floodlights around it until Sgts. Larry Hemion and Gary Whinery arrived.

He then ran into the hospital, pursued by police who caught and subdued him in the lobby.

Police said Tate refused identification and was booked as a John Doe for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon, auto burglary, and felony vandalism.

SOUTH LAGUNA (AP) — An off-duty sheriff's reserve deputy has been mistakenly shot by officers looking for a former Hare Krishna member wanted on murder charges, authorities said Friday.

Acting on information gathered by Newport Beach detectives on the whereabouts of Roy Richard, Laguna Beach officers and Orange County sheriff's deputies went Tuesday night to a South Laguna address that turned out to be the home of a sheriff's reserve deputy, 50-year-old William Kanne, said sheriff's Sgt. David Keller.

AWAKENED by glass shattered as officers attempted to gain access through windows, Kanne went to the door with his gun drawn and was shot by two Laguna Beach plainclothes officers, Keller said. He was reported in stable condition Friday.

Keller said the misinformation about the address apparently resulted when investigators incorrectly cross-referenced a phone number they were given.

Richard is one of four persons sought on warrants charging murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the death of Steven J. Bovan, 36, of Fountain Valley. He was shot to death Oct. 22.

The others charged were Elsie Kulik, 28; Joseph Davis, 27; and Joseph G. Federowski.

THE murder plot came after the kidnapping of Alexander Kulik, 26, husband of the woman being sought and an officer in an Orange County business called Prasadam Distributors Inc., for which Bovan had worked. Bovan, suspected by Kulik of embezzling from the firm, kidnapped Kulik and collected $100,000 ransom, authorities said.

Newport Beach Police Sgt. Kenneth Thompson said, "We will establish in court that the Prasadam officers had current links with the Society for Krishna Consciousness," the Hindu-oriented religious cult commonly known as Hare Krishna.

A day after Bovan's killing, when an attempt was made to sell a car resembling one that sped away from the murder scene, police arrested Jerry P. Flore, 41; Anthony Marone Jr., 23; Raymond Stephen Resco, 28; and Deborah Addison, 24, of Huntington Beach.

They were also charged with murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

Inventor gets his laser patent after 18 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 18 years of court battles — including three years when the military refused to let him see his own notes — a 57-year-old inventor has been granted one of the basic patents on the laser.

"It looks like I'll have something to retire on," reflected R. Gordon Gould.

Gould, vice president of a small optical fiber firm in Gaithersburg, Md., has been officially recognized as developer of the system using solid material, such as a ruby, to generate the laser beam. This type of laser represents about one-third of the high-intensity light devices now in use.

In addition, Gould has patents pending on lasers using gas instead of solids, as well as several applications of the laser. At least one of these has already been recognized in Canada, although not yet in the United States.

Gould's long fight for recognition was hampered by a run-in with the military establishment that started in 1959 when he sought to interest defense officials in his work.

Seeing the possibility of a "death ray," they classified his patent application secret. And since Gould had some left-wing political involvement in the early 1940s, he was denied security clearance, his notebooks were confiscated and he wasn't allowed to work with defense experts following up his ideas.

"That slowed down their laser development," he noted, "because they couldn't tell me what they were doing and get guidance from me."

And, he added, "you'd think that when they classify something and put it in a vault it would be safe, wouldn't you. But when I got the material back after three years, one of the notebooks was missing."

This proved less of a problem for Gould than it might have been, however, since he had kept copies of the notebooks without the knowledge of the Defense Department.

The incident did result in some problems during his legal battle for his patent rights, however.

Opponents questioned whether his work was detailed enough for a patent since it took the military two years to make a laser while working with his notes.

Lasers, with sales currently estimated at $1 billion a year and projected at $5 billion by 1984, are used for delicate surgery, in the transmission of photographs, for cutting metal, for determining distances, relaying communications and for military applications.

Basically they are devices for amplifying light

R. GORDON GOULD and laser device he now holds patent on after a struggle of nearly two decades.

—AP LASERPHOTO

into a powerful straight beam. It can be focused to a fine point to generate heat or extreme light intensity with great delicacy.

The word laser, coined by Gould in a 1957 notebook, stands for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation.

The announcement of the patent has reverberated through the laser industry, with manufacturers facing the possibility of new license fees and royalty payments on the devices.

Eugene M. Lang, head of the firm which is marketing Gould's patent rights, said he expects when all the patent issues are settled, Gould will have a claim on 90 percent of the lasers manufactured or sold in the United States.

He indicated that the firm will ask for a percentage of the first selling price of the machines and will seek payment from users only if no agreement can be reached concerning lasers already sold.

Reaction has been mixed from laser manufacturers, which now face payments extending during the 17-year life of the patent. An earlier patent issued to Dr. Charles H. Townes and Arthur Schawlow expired more than a year ago.

Anti-beetle DDT bugs airline suit plaintiffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer lobbying group charges that a DDT spraying program to keep Japanese beetles from hitchhiking to California aboard commercial airliners is exposing passengers to serious health hazards.

"DDT is a toxic, persistent chemical that is believed to cause chronic injury to human beings when ingested, inhaled or absorbed through the skin," said a suit filed Friday in U.S. District Court against the secretary of agriculture.

Plaintiffs, in addition to the Aviation Consumer Action Project, are an airline attendants' union and two "women of child bearing age . . . each of whom has used and intends in the future to use commercial airline flights."

The suit said there is substantial risk that exposure of pregnant women to the chemical compound causes birth defects in their children.

DDT was banned five years ago as posing "an unacceptable risk to man and his environment," but its use in combination with another chemical as a spray dust was permitted on airplanes.

Since the mid-1960s the Agriculture Department has periodically ordered airlines to fumigate aircraft to control the spread of the Japanese beetle, a crop pest that causes an estimated $10 million damage each year.

That happened last May when flights arriving in California from Washington's Dulles International Airport were found to carry the dread slow-aways.

However, the lawsuit said: "DDT has been proven in mammalian tests to cause cancer. There is no known threshold safety level."

The dust, a "micro-nized" combination of DDT and the chemical Sevin, is used only after all food, water and utensils are removed and all food preparation areas are masked off, an Agriculture Department spokesman said.

But the suit charged that passenger seats, armrests, food handling areas and other surfaces throughout the plane are contaminated and that Food and Drug Administration tests in 1976 "disclosed that food contact surfaces in the galleys of commercial aircraft were contaminated with DDT."

It accused the department of violating the law by failing to publish notice that planes will be sprayed and by refusing to prepare an environmental impact statement.

Impasse ends at Lockheed

Associated Press

Negotiators for the Lockheed Corp. and 19,000 strikers ended a five-week impasse Friday and returned to the bargaining table, but at least one union official was not optimistic about a quick settlement.

"We haven't met since Oct. 5 on these national issues, and it may take a while to come to terms," said Neil Vandercook, spokesman for the International Association of Machinists.

About 14,000 IAM members in California walked out Oct. 10, five days after talks broke down on such national issues as wages and a company proposal to change its job-seniority system. Another 5,000 workers at Lockheed plants in Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi and West Virginia remained on the job until Oct. 19.

Sun to heat school with no moving parts (except kids)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Researchers are constructing a school building they say will capture 85 percent of its heat from the sun by using special windows, ceiling tiles and Venetian blinds — but no moving parts.

The one-story structure, which will be the size and shape of a house, will be used for classrooms at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Its builders say its heating system is the first of its kind.

They say that heating through the building's structural parts is far cheaper than the more conventional kind of solar heating, which uses the sun to heat circulating water.

The 900-square-foot building, which will cost $100,000, will be finished in January.

The new building materials being used are:

—Double-pane windows that lose one-quarter of the heat of ordinary insulated glass but let in almost as much light.

—One-inch-thick ceiling tiles that store the day's heat and release it at night.

—Venetian blinds that reflect sunlight onto the ceiling.

The heat that does not come from the sun will be produced by electric base-board units.

Timothy E. Johnson, a lecturer in architecture in charge of the project, said the windows cost 20 percent more than ordinary double glass, and the ceiling tiles are twice as expensive as normal.

This means, he said, that it would take nine or 10 years for a homeowner to regain the extra investment over heating with oil.

However, this method is less expensive than the flat-plate solar collectors that require fans and pumps to circulate water.

"The economies are vastly improved," Johnson said. "Even though I think a five-year pay-back period would be better, we're getting there much faster than by the other method, which takes about 30 years."

He said the secret of the windows is a sheet of coated plastic that is inserted between the double panes of glass.

The ceiling tiles have a core of chemicals that melt during the day. However, as the room cools at night, they return to a solid form and give off the heat they have stored.

The blinds have mirrors on their top surfaces to reflect the sun. They can be closed at night like ordinary blinds.

Johnson said the new materials, which were largely developed at MIT, will be commercially available within the next year.

Official wages war against nuclear waste sites in Illinois

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' attorney general has opened a multi-front war against nuclear waste disposal sites "to prevent the state from becoming the nuclear dumping ground for the nation."

Attorney General William Scott says he hopes his actions will prevent shipment to Illinois of radioactive wastes from at least 11 states.

Scott says the plant, 60 miles southwest of Chicago, "is an unacceptable risk."

Some industry spokesmen have accused Scott of using scare tactics in his campaign in Congress, the courts and state and federal agencies.

Datsun to recall 160,000 '77 cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nissan Motor Corp. is recalling about 160,000 1977-model Datsuns to correct a defective emission control, the Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday.

The defect involves a braze joint that could break and result in an exhaust leak, EPA said.

The Datsun models involved are the B210, F10, 810, 710, 200SX and 280Z. All were built before Feb. 1, 1977, EPA said.

Boycott by blacks at school ends

BOYNTON, Okla. (AP) — The Boynton School Board unanimously adopted a racial committee's recommendations to ease racial tensions Friday after a black student boycott over official opposition to the planned delivery of a Martin Luther King Jr. speech at a school talent show.

Black students stayed away from classes all week to protest school Superintendent Harold Cantwell's remarks to a black student who wanted to present the late civil rights leader's "I Have a Dream" speech at the talent show scheduled for last Friday.

On Friday, 10 negotiators for the school board announced agreement with black leaders on a list of grievances the blacks had presented against the school administration.

"OUT OF something bad, something good comes," Cantwell said Friday night. "I couldn't be more pleased that the board is taking the recommendations seriously."

Police Chief Chuck Myers had said racial tensions were high in this tiny northeastern Oklahoma town and that residents of both races were "packing guns." But on Friday night, he said tensions had lessened considerably.

At a 10-minute meeting, the all-white, five-member board agreed with the negotiators' recommendations to reschedule the talent show "at an early date" and to allow Sherida Jones, 17, to present the King speech.

The board also agreed not to take disciplinary action against about 115 black students who participated in the boycott. There are about 120 black students in Boynton.

The board said students who boycotted classes would have a "reasonable time" to make up missed schoolwork.

The board also agreed to name a black member of the board "as soon as possible" and to start an affirmative action program to increase the number of blacks on the school staff — four of the town's 20 teachers now are black.

'Punk' window display in store pulled after protest

DALLAS (AP) — In response to protests, Neiman-Marcus has withdrawn a window display from its downtown Dallas department store that showed four black, bald mannequins outfitted in "punk" fashion amid a setting of high and low-class garbage.

Decorator Perry Bentley, who set up the display last month, said he tried to imitate the fashion popular in England — an intentionally disreputable look that features tattered garb adorned with ornaments like safety pins and razor blades. Dallas store officials call the image "the trashy look."

Surrounding the mannequins were garbage cans and plastic trash bags, from which peeked the edges of such garbage as fake orange peels, a crystal goblet and a $7,000 white mink coat.

Al Lipscomb, a local black activist, said that after he received a call complaining about black mannequins being used in the display, "I went down to take a look and I was completely appalled at what I saw."

"If they think it's trashy, why put black mannequins with it? I asked them to remove it," he said.

Lipscomb said he also complained to the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, two black radio stations, two black newspapers, the Dallas Police Department and the City Hall Action Center. The display was removed.

Thomas Alexander, Neiman-Marcus senior vice president, said Thursday that he first learned of the controversy while in Washington for a store opening.

"I received a call at the airport," Alexander said. "Clearly, we'd never put a window in that would offend anyone. In this case ... it just got in without anybody seeing it."

Bentley said the only reason he chose black mannequins for the display was "because they were new and bizarre enough bald to go with the clothes."

Black tries again in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The first black to mount a serious campaign for mayor of New Orleans and the son of an Italian immigrant square off today in a runoff to succeed Mayor Moon Landrieu.

Ernest Morial, a former appeals court judge who led an 11-man field in October, is running against Joe DiRosa, a white city councilman.

Landrieu, a former president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, is barred by law from running for a third term.

The choice of Morial or DiRosa is the same one which faced voters eight years ago in a City Council election. Then, with whites comprising 70 percent of the registered voters, DiRosa won by 5,600 votes.

Now, registration is 58 percent white and 42 percent black and Morial led an 11-man field by 4,400 votes six weeks ago in the first mayoral election. DiRosa squeezed into second place by 265 votes.

Race has been an underlying issue throughout the campaign, but both candidates have said they do not want the color of their skin to elect them and that they can be mayor of all the people.

L.A. Muslim guilty of '72 rioting in La.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Dudley P. Beavers of Los Angeles, the last of 14 Black Muslims to be tried in connection with a 1972 disturbance that left five dead, was convicted Friday.

A state district court jury found Beavers guilty of violating the Louisiana Riot Act by participating in a riot and using public property — a street — unlawfully.

The riot act was passed by the 1969 legislature in reaction to unrest in cities and on college campuses around the country. The law has been used only a few times.

The charges against Beavers resulted from a Jan. 10, 1972, incident in which three blacks and two sheriff's officers were killed after Muslims blocked a city street.

Several Muslims are serving time on various charges in connection with the incident.

Beavers fled from Baton Rouge after the 1972 incident and didn't return until December 1975.

The 12-member jury deliberated for four hours before announcing its verdict Friday. Judge John F. Covington delayed sentencing. The maximum penalty would be 21 years. Covington spent more than an hour instructing the jury and explaining the riot act.

Beavers had contended that he dispersed before the Muslims and deputies began fighting, and that therefore he had not violated the law.

Inmate hailed for saving lives in fire

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — A grand jury on Friday commended a Maury County Jail inmate for saving the lives of fellow inmates in a jailhouse fire and concluded that no jail employees were to blame for the blaze, which killed 42 prisoners and visitors.

The grand jury's report was based on an inspection of the jail and testimony from 53 witnesses, including 14 inmates and 15 visitors, during a three-month investigation.

By the grand jury's count, 33 inmates and nine visitors died as thick clouds of black smoke rolled through the one-story, concrete-block building last June 26.

Earlier official counts listed 34 inmates and eight visitors dead.

Twenty-nine other persons were injured in the fire.

Andrew Zimmer, a teenage runaway from a Wisconsin home for troubled youths, was charged with arson in the blaze. He has since turned 17, and authorities have not yet decided whether to try him as an adult or a juvenile.

Zimmer had been confined in the jail's foam-rubber padded cell because he was unruly. The grand jury said the fire began in his cell and was largely confined to the synthetic padding. Zimmer was the only person to suffer burns.

The grand jury blamed all fatalities on inhalation of smoke from the padding, technically carbon monoxide poisoning. Among the 14 recommendations in its report were elimination of the padded cell and use of fire retardant cotton furnishings.

Other recommendations included installation of smoke detectors, an exhaust system, other fire protection systems and closed-circuit television surveillance at the 13-year-old jail, which has a capacity of 60 prisoners.

It said it was able to make suggestions which might have helped avoid the tragedy but that considering the excitement in the emergency and the possibility of human error under stress it could not fix blame.

"Special commendation should be directed to Seymour Myers, an inmate, who many of the surviving inmates give credit for saving their lives," the grand jury said.

U.S. program to treat sex-abused children

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has launched a pilot program to treat child victims of sexual abuse who, according to one study, may number one-third of all children.

The program of medical and psychological treatment for 150 children in the Washington area will be conducted at the Children's Hospital-National Medical Center under a $10,000 federal grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr. Frederick Green, associate director of the hospital, said Thursday that no one knows how many children are abused sexually each year. And the term "abuse" can encompass a broad spectrum of incidents ranging from obscene gestures or exhibitionism to rape and incest.

Green said he would work with a broad definition that considers abuse "an episode in which there is contact or interaction between a child and an adult when the child is being used as an object of gratification for adult sexual needs or desires."

A 20-year old survey of 1,800 college students, the only one of its type ever conducted, reported that 35 percent of the women and 30 percent of the men had experienced episodes that would fit Green's definition of abuse.

There are many other estimates of the scope of the problem, but their accuracy is often suspect because no one knows how many cases go unreported.

Foreign firms hit S. Africa takes wartime powers

Combined News Services

JOHANNESBURG — The South African government took special powers over industry Friday that include the right to order foreign-owned plants to produce strategic materials that become unavailable from overseas suppliers.

Although the powers could be used to force foreign companies to produce arms and other military equipment in defiance of the arms embargo imposed by the United Nations last week, the official who invoked them said this was not his intention.

"THESE measures have definitely not been instituted for the production of arms," said Jan Christian Heunis, minister of economic affairs, who invoked sections of the National Supplies Procurement Act with a proclamation in the Government Gazette. The statute, a consolidation of wartime emergency measures, was passed in 1970.

The measures authorize the government to compel the production or delivery of materials deemed necessary for the security of the country.

If companies resist, their premises can be entered and their goods seized. Their officers are subject to fines and a maximum of two years' imprisonment.

MEANWHILE, a Swiss banker warned South Africa on Friday that foreign investments might dry up because of fear that the government's policies could lead to "revolution, civil or underground warfare."

Addressing the Financial Mail's annual investment conference, Robert Studer of the Union Bank of Switzerland said it wasn't South Africa's policy of racial segregation that would deter foreign investors but their growing feeling that the country is a bad risk.

Studer said investors believed it was unlikely the West would agree to an economic embargo against this country.

"On the other hand, serious concern continues to exist that South Africa's policy of apartheid (racial separation) could produce revolution, civil or underground warfare and even open war between East and West," he said.

An American banker who asked not to be identified said many Western bankers have ordered a review of their loans to South Africa in the wake of protests, arrests and crackdowns that followed the Sept. 12 prison death of black national leader Steve Biko.

The banker said long-term capital available to South Africa has been decreasing steadily since 1974 and the trend was accelerated after rioting in Soweto last year.

$5 million in drugs seized, four arrested

A Compton narcotics investigator was overcome Friday by ether fumes that led two policemen to the site of an apparent PCP ("angel dust") factory in Compton, where they seized an estimated $5 million worth of drugs, police reported.

The investigator, who was not named, was given respiratory therapy at Dominguez Valley Community Hospital and released.

Four persons were arrested at 3:30 a.m. Friday at 214 N. Holly Ave. after patrolling officers, confronted with the odor of ether in the neighborhood, followed their noses to the Holly Avenue address.

After reinforcements arrived, police entered the home and spotted the PCP, they arrested Virgil Dugan, 33, and his 28-year-old wife Jacqueline, both of that address; Alvin Boyland, 18, of Los Angeles, and Boyland's unidentified 17-year-old girlfriend.

Police found 20 pounds of PCP in crystal form and 154 ounces in liquid form.

air strike killed or wounded 12 persons in the area, and that an Israeli jet was shot down during the raid.

AT THE United Nations, Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog blamed Palestinian guerrillas for civilian deaths in Israeli air raids against southern Lebanon, saying the guerrillas stored their ammunition too close to population centers.

At the same time, the U.N. General Assembly's special political committee recommended two resolutions against Israel for the assembly's adoption and only Israel opposed them. The measures dealt with Israeli treatment of Palestinian refugees.

A few hours earlier, the military command said Katyusha rockets fired from Lebanon landed near an Israeli kibbutz, causing no damage or casualties. Israeli gunners returned fire, a spokesman said.

Officials in Beirut said the Israeli gunners shelled five southern Lebanese towns for three hours with no casualties reported.

Meanwhile, a bomb exploded in the southern Israeli town of Qiryat Gat, slightly wounding a child, police said.

linian area at Azzieh in southern Lebanon that left 110 dead and 150 wounded.

Manure blast in East Lakewood rocks wide area

The Katyusha missiles that struck near Yiron, two miles south of the central sector of the Lebanese border, were of the same sort that killed three Israelis in the town of Nahariya this week and prompted a strong retaliatory air raid by Israel that left 110 dead and 150 wounded Wednesday.

Reliable sources in Beirut said, however, the U.S. was mediating between Israel, Lebanon and Syria in an effort to re-establish the U.S.-engineered cease-fire that took hold on Sept. 26. The sources said Syria was pressuring the Palestinians to observe the cease-fire and avoid providing Israel with excuses for further cross-border attacks.

Manure blast in East Lakewood rocks wide area

Flames shot 75 feet in East Lakewood Friday night after an explosion at a stable rocked several blocks of houses and leveled a stack of horse manure, tumbleweeds and lumber. Arson is suspected.

The fire was located on Southern California Edison Company transmission line right-of-way property behind horse stables on Carson Street near the San Gabriel River.

Firemen extinguished the blaze within 10 minutes but mop-up operations took several more hours. The county's Hawaiian Gardens fire station reported being flooded with calls soon after the blast.

TAX CUTS

In addition to the retreat on comprehensive tax reform, Blumenthal also disclosed two other apparent changes in administration policy.

In answer to a question, he said the administration does not put the fight against unemployment ahead of combating inflation, in an apparent reversal of Carter's campaign pledge that creating jobs would be the first priority of his administration.

"We can't deal with one without the other. . . . They are of equal importance," Blumenthal said.

When the secretary said the administration has no basic differences with Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board, it disturbed committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Proxmire said he was "perplexed, puzzled and disappointed" because Blumenthal seemed to "endorse the Federal Reserve proposal to restrict the money supply." Proxmire said recent Fed actions to restrain money growth will lead to still higher interest rates and slower economic growth.

Ford 'set up' to meet Korea scandal suspect

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Ohio congressman tried several times to arrange a meeting between then-President Ford and Korean businessman Hancho C. Kim, now accused of influence-buying, a former Ford aide said Friday night.

"It was presumed to be just a picture-and-handshake meeting," said Max Friedersdorf, former chief congressional liaison aide to Ford.

He said the requests for the meetings were turned down by the National Security Council but he never knew why.

Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, tried at least three times to arrange the meetings, Friedersdorf said.

Guyer's wife, reached by telephone in Ohio, said he was traveling and could not be reached for comment immediately.

Guyer earlier acknowledged he did some favors for Kim because they had known each other at Findlay College in Ohio.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department's top negotiator said Friday he still wants Tongsun Park to testify in U.S. trials on South Korean influence-buying.

Assistant Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti also said no agreement has been reached in obtaining testimony from Park, a rice dealer who has been indicted in connection with the Korean scandal.

"I can't measure the closeness" of such an agreement, he said.

Civiletti said Justice Department negotiators want Park's testimony on the alleged influence-buying so it can be "effectively presented for sound prosecution" in court.

He said the most effective prosecution would require having Park return to the United States to testify in court. But Civiletti indicated the U.S. negotiators have not told the South Koreans they will take nothing less. Park currently is in South Korea.

Civiletti did not deny reports that the Justice Department proposed questioning Park in the Dominican Republic a month ago.

VETS' GENERATION GAP

uniform caps that many now make fun of, swap stories and rediscover the camaraderie of the military — just as World War II veterans eventually forgot about the generation gap with World War I veterans.

Nevertheless, there appear to be serious tensions between the two generations. The military men from the Vietnam period are indeed different from earlier veterans and they are making the transition.

It's very difficult to reach these young fellows," said John C. Crain, a VFW member in Seattle. "We want them to take over from us eventually with new ideas. But they figure we're a bunch of old fogies who are sitting around telling old war stories and having a good time."

The evolution of values is two-sided: Some older veterans admit that they, too, are uncomfortable with the younger veterans with their longer hair, beards, drugs and other differences in lifestyle.

Herman Roth, an enlisted-man veteran of World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam who now helps veterans find jobs in Chicago, said:

"Older veterans can have two martinis for lunch and three martinis when they get home from work, and they think that is OK. But if a veteran from Vietnam happens to experiment with one marijuana cigarette, that's bad. It's a case of the pot calling the kettle black."

"The older men at first didn't get along with the long hair, the mustaches, the beards," said James E. Tripp, a Vietnam veteran who is an American Legion official in Louisiana. "They say, 'Well, you weren't really in the war.'"

"Now from the looks of it," with membership rolls in trouble, he added, "they're begging the young men, 'Come in, come in.'"

Some veterans' groups have been successful recently in luring Vietnam veterans through special recruiting drives aimed at their generation, and Vietnam veterans have risen to head several state organizations. In Texas, for example, four or five senior VFW executives served in Vietnam.

In many cases, however, efforts to recruit Vietnam veterans have provoked power struggles between generations. James Kissner, the state Legion commander in Illinois, where membership has dropped to 177,491 from a peak of 220,800 in 1957, said, "The biggest debate among older vets and young vets in the American Legion is on who is going to run the post."

Although there have been only a handful of cases so far, some Vietnam-era veterans, contending that their interests are different from their predecessors', are taking over veterans' clubs.

Among other things, they contend that the established organizations have failed to look out for their interests — causing them, for example, to lose to minorities and women the traditional edge that veterans received in government jobs.

"Unfortunately, most Vietnam veterans are like ostriches with their heads in the sand," said Tom Hanson, commander of the Theodore Koranyi American Legion Post in the Bronx, one of those taken over by the Vietnam veterans.

"They don't want to hear anything about the military. What they have to realize is that they won't be heard unless they join organizations like we have."

Last year a militant group of Vietnam-era veterans joined Hollywood American Legion Post 525 in Los Angeles, ousted officers of the World War II era and endorsed amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders and deserters, a position that is anathema to the national Legion leadership.

More recently, a former post officer in Los Angeles was expelled from the Legion after a confrontation with the leadership over problems which included efforts to induct 32 minority-member Vietnamese veterans into a Legion post.

"Most of the people who fought in Vietnam were minorities," said Ronald Biltzer, who was instrumental in the takeover of the Hollywood post. "Yet, they're not welcome by the leadership of these organizations, although I think the rank and file is more open than the leadership."

"Most of the leadership is from the class of '46, the people who served in World War II; they aren't interested in sharing their power with anybody. The traditional organizations like the American Legion are ripe for a takeover by Vietnam veterans."

Council of Churches urges 'abortion equality' for poor

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Council of Churches has called on Congress and the states to end what it called discrimination against the poor in the form of denial of public funds for abortions.

The Council's 252-member governing board, ending a three-day meeting Friday, said the council has no policy on abortion "as such," but noted the U.S. Supreme Court has called abortion a "legal right."

"A right guaranteed to all by law must not be denied because of economic status," the board said in a resolution.

The Rev. Vladimir Berzonsky of Seven Hills, Ohio, an Orthodox Church in America delegate, said Orthodox churches could not support the resolution because "human rights should be interpreted not only in favor of women but in favor of humans as yet unborn."

But Council President William P. Thompson, head of the United Presbyterian Church, refused to rule the resolution out of order, saying the issue was not the "merits of abortion" but whether a Supreme Court decision was to be "applied equally to all citizens."

In other action, the council, which includes most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations in this country, declared that one of its foremost concerns is the plight of "our oppressed brothers and sisters" under repressive regimes.

Citing the Soviet Union's failure to extend amnesty to "prisoners of conscience" in its celebration of the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, the board said:

"We appeal to President Brezhnev to release, in the spirit of Helsinki, all imprisoned Baptists, Catholics, Jews, Moslems, Orthodox and other believers, as well as political dissenters."

"We appeal to all religious communities in the U.S.A. to pray... for all prisoners of conscience in the U.S.S.R. and other countries under Soviet domination, and for all victims of oppression, wherever and by whom they are being persecuted."

The council also urged President Carter to "continue to pursue vigorously his policy" supporting human rights everywhere.

Earlier, Carter had sent delegates a telegram voicing appreciation for the council's vote Thursday to support the proposed Panama Canal treaties. Delegates said it was the first time in 16 years the White House had acknowledged a council action.

The board also voted to:

- Support Carter's efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East by bringing together "representatives of all parties, including the Palestinians" for negotiations.
- Support reconstruction aid to Vietnam.
- Call for an end to nuclear weapons production and a halt in funds for the neutron bomb.
- Accept an application of the National Council of Community Churches as the 31st denomination in the council.
- Withdraw all funds in financial institutions dealing with South Africa.
- Support a boycott against products of the J.P. Stevens Co., saying it has repeatedly violated labor laws and intimidated workers.

Conservatives request Women's Year audit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's 14-member elected delegation to the International Women's Year convention is asking for an audit of IWY funds, a review of state and national ballot results and a compilation of all minority reports.

The conservative Utah group also said it wants reports to the president and Congress listing members of national and state commissions for or against the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion and freedom from homosexual discrimination.

"It is our opinion that the IWY national commission is a pressure group whose purpose is to secure passage of the ERA and reproductive freedom recommendations," the delegation said in an unsigned open letter.

The four-day conference opens Friday in Houston.

"The purpose of the Houston conference, as designed by the national IWY commission, is not to allow the free input of ideas and proposals of women across the nation but rather is a massive demonstration of political sentiment by those of a certain persuasion," the letter said.

The letter also said the IWY handbook, "To Form a More Perfect Union," fails to recommend issues supporting the family, the aged, religion and marriage and those fighting pornography.

Lakewood First Baptist Church — which, as should be known by this time, is actually in Long Beach — opens its 30th anniversary week Sunday. Special morning and evening sermons are set as the large church at 5336 Arbor Road recalls its roots.

Toward week's end, a banquet will be held in the Golden Sails Restaurant and the next day, Nov. 19, is set aside as Homecoming Sunday for the largest unit in the Baptist General Conference.

It all began Nov. 13, 1947, when 14 charter members called Dr. Norman S. MacPherson as their pastor. Three months later this little group bought land on Arbor Road for $6,000. And in March 1948, with only $800 on hand, construction was begun on an auditorium designed to seat 300.

In the years after 1951, when Rev. Harold S. Carlson was called, Lakewood First embarked on a major building boom. An addition to the original auditorium was made and a two-story educational wing constructed. Launched in 1958 was a $485,000 program to erect a new auditorium seating 1,200. A two-story educational building was finished in 1970. In the recent past, under the leadership of today's Pastor James A. Borror, a lower auditorium was finished.

Says Borror, summing up: "This church has a great heritage, but I believe an even greater future lies before us. Our goal of $200,000 — to continue the improvement program — is only the first step in strengthening and expanding our evangelism and discipleship here at Lakewood."

Affects 1,800 seniors Methodist retirement system asks court to name trustee

Special to The I.P.T. The Methodist Church-operated Pacific Homes retirement home network has asked a federal bankruptcy court in Los Angeles to appoint a trustee to oversee operation and reorganization of a financially-troubled corporation now serving 1,800 senior citizens.

Faced with crippling lawsuits and lack of funds, the homes' board said it had no choice but to seek conversion of bankruptcy proceedings from Chapter XI of the federal statutes to Chapter X. The home had filed under less-stringent Chapter XI in February.

A major effect of the action last week will be to remove the Pacific Homes board of directors from immediate supervision of operations. It will continue in an advisory capacity to the court-appointed trustee, however.

Another effect will be to eliminate a request to the court by 150 residents that their present contracts and other claims be honored.

Unclear at present, however, is what action — if any — the sponsoring board of directors from immediate supervision of operations. It will continue in an advisory capacity to the court-appointed trustee, however.

Many persons living in Pacific Homes facilities paid a flat fee upon entering with the promise they would receive care for the remainder of their lives. Others paid a combination of life-care fees and monthly accommodation assessments with no escalation clauses.

Coming events in L.B. religious community

Special altar candles were lit Friday night at Long Beach's Temple Israel in commemoration of the 39th anniversary of Kristal Nacht. Rabbi Jonathan Brown preached a special sermon reminding a later generation of the World War II Holocaust in which an estimated 6 million Jews were slaughtered.

On Kristal Nacht, literally "night of the broken glass," Jewish homes, synagogues and shops across all Germany were destroyed and untold persons killed by Nazi government order.

Putting it into perspective much later, journalist-historian William L. Shirer wrote, "On the flaming, riotous night of Nov. 9, 1938, the Third Reich deliberately turned down a dark and savage road from which there was to be no return."

"Goings on" plans to provide a special listing next Saturday of Thanksgiving Day religious services planned throughout our area. Those officials responsible for presenting these are urged to mail in the details next week, well ahead of the usual early Thursday afternoon copy deadline.

Similarly, help is solicited in readying this column for the week of Nov. 26-Dec. 3. Because of the Thanksgiving holiday work schedule, "Goings on" must receive announcements for the coming week no later than 1 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 23. Understanding and cooperation of our religious community is asked.

And over the week-in, week-out long haul, it would be enormously helpful to the Religion Editor if his name were added to more mailing lists for church bulletins and newsletters - whether published weekly, semi-weekly or monthly. Those churches already providing this assistance must have noticed how material culled from their sources is printed regularly with credit to them, not only in "Goings on," but elsewhere in the weekly religious section. The address: 804 Pine Ave., Long Beach 90844.

Letters - To the Religion Editor:

Born again Christian says

I am a born again Christian. I do not believe that tongues and miracles and prophecies have ceased.

All, I repeat All born again Christians do not agree on this point of view. There are many areas of disagreement between Christians as to style of worship, mode of baptism, interpretations of prophecy and things like that.

But when it comes to the subject of Salvation, I believe that "real" Christians are united 100 per cent. The finished work of Jesus Christ on the Cross of Calvary, and His precious shed blood applied to the sinners heart by faith.

There is no other plan!

I also believe it is impossible for an unregenerate (not born-again) person to understand God's Word, the Bible.

I would like to point out to Mr. Wilbur Douglass (Religion, Nov. 5) that the quotation from Isaiah 29:13 does not pertain to a worldwide apostasy.

In verses 9 through 16, God is giving them the reasons for the punishment. The portion of scripture Mr. Douglass misused ... was not prophetic.

His reference to II Timothy 4:3-4 was also out of harmony with the statement he made, that it pertained to the "... 18 centuries plus" since the Apostle Paul's death.

Once again, Amos 8:11-12, out of context, is misused scripture. I urge all seekers of truth to read the entire chapter 8 of Amos. Read the entire Book of Amos. You'll find it has nothing to do with a universal apostasy. It pertains to the scattering of Israel.

And as for the prophecy from Malachi 4:5, concerning the coming of Elia, it doesn't say "... before the second coming of the Savior." It says "before the coming of the great, and dreadful day of the Lord."

This prophecy came to pass about 2,000 years ago in the birth and ministry of John the Baptist. The Angel Gabriel said so in Luke 1:13-17.

The Lord Jesus said so in Matt. 17:10-13 and Matt. 11:13-14.

The Bible is the word of God. And if the Word of

Movers & Doers

Gwynn Devey, 50, began his ministry Sunday as pastor of the North Bellflower Church of Christ, 14913 S. Clark St.

He had served for the past year at the Costa Mesa First Christian Church and before that spent seven years at a church in the San Francisco area.

A native of Pennsylvania, Devey served in the Navy during World War II. Following discharge he began training at Cincinnati Bible Seminary to become a medical missionary. He completed his studies at San Jose Bible College, but entered the preaching ministry instead of the mission field.

Devey and his wife, Lorna, have been married for 30 years. They have two adult children, both living in the San Francisco area.

The church had been looking for a pastor for a full year. During most of that period Dr. Kenneth Stewart, former Pacific Christian College president, served as interim pastor.

Pastor David Hocking of Long Beach First Brethren Church officiated at pre-game chapel services when World Series came to Los Angeles last month. His subject came from Isaiah 40:28-31. At same time Bill Pannell of Pasadena's Fuller Theological Seminary talked about the Good Samaritan. The Dodgers lost, 4-2.

... Recently named "Clergyman of the Year" by Religious Heritage of America was Dr. Robert H. Schuller, founding pastor of Garden Grove Community Church. He was recognized for his work in the ministry, as an author, lecturer, newspaper columnist and television personality.

... Larry E. Lewis, youth and music minister in Narbonne Avenue Baptist Church, Lomita, was honored recently on his fifth anniversary with church staff.

SPECIAL NOTE - Announcements of church Christmas bazaars should be sent directly to this newspaper's Life/Style section. They will be featured there rather than on these pages today and in coming issues.

God tells us to preach the gospel, and baptize in the name of the eternal Godhead, then this is all the authority we need.

In defense of Pastor Dixon

In regard to your article of the First Christian Church dispute (Religion, Nov. 5). If my memory serves me right this Pastor (Michael E.) Dixon is the same man your paper did an article about approximately two years ago. This was quite a flattering article in which was said the elders were hoping Pastor Dixon would bring in some new blood. Now they want him out for the same reason.

There is some reading between the lines that needs to be done. This man and wife have suffered more than your article stated. There was more than just the election held by "Dixon supporters."

There was an election prior to that victory, to keep Pastor Dixon. (That was) held by Mr. Raymond Gayton and Mr. Kenneth Stewart. That vote was legal by the recognized elders of the state and Pastor Dixon was still voted to be kept pastor.

The elders did not even abide by their own bylaws. At this time Kenneth Stewart was not a member; he was and still is a temporary minister of a different Christian Church.

The people have voted several times; each time Dixon was reinstated. You also neglected to state that it was a handful of people who did not wish to worship or abide by the bylaws of the church. Even to date Dixon's Sunday services run 200 or over and the other element runs about 80 and under, and not all of these are members but visiting people from friends of those in this church whose intent is numbers and have no intention of becoming members, because they are already members of other churches.

It is amazing the causes people will blindly rally to. The sad thing in this is Dixon and "supporters" (you make us all sound like underwear) wish with all one heart and do open our doors to anyone who is in need and wishes to worship with us. But the "elders" church" frisks you for a birth certificate and to see if you're still wet behind the ears from baptism.

I'm sure not all agree but one thing is for sure. Corinthians 6:1-7 plainly states you are not to take your brother to court. This is one (reason) why we chose not to love these men as our elders and also the fact they stated they did not fully agree with the Bible.

Even as recent as Nov. 5, this last week, one of the leading elders was heard tongue-lashing Mr. Dixon, stating "Don't you think we can get you out of here one way or the other? I hope you are going to enjoy working for 50-cents a week. We have consulted a criminal lawyer."

They want to put criminal charges now. For what? If anyone should want a lawyer (which he won't), Dixon has need of it. Nothing major, of course, his house was burned and then a few months later his car stolen and four hours later found completely burnt to the frame. He has been slapped in the face by sweet "defenseless" ladies. Bad mouth. His phone rings in the middle and then hangs up for over a year. He's had his pay check cut off, etc., etc. And for the finish he gets sued!

Since they base their salvation on baptism will you answer me the question, why do they keep draining the baptismal? We have people waiting to be baptized and each Sunday some invisible person pulls the plug. If this is the case, someone is playing God, deciding who is going to be saved or not.

This is beyond ridicule. Praise God for Ephesians 2:8-9. I defy anyone to find a drop of water in RELIGION EDITOR'S NOTE: Court records mention only one vote on the retention or discharge of Pastor Dixon. Depending on who was doing the counting, that vote was recorded as 128-124 in favor of keeping him or 127-121 in favor of keeping him. However, court-appointed referee Max Chudnow reported to Judge Hampton Hutton that the valid vote in that election was 111-59 in favor of discharging Dixon.

New motivation for you

Anyone can feel dull in this exciting, action-packed world. It is a pity but there are human beings who find life uninteresting — for whom there is just no inspiration, no motivation. This is the sad situation of all too many people.

If you are one of these, the important thing to realize is that you do not have to stay that way. You can have a life packed with excitement and enjoyment. Unlimited reserves of new zest for living are available to you and everyone. I am constantly meeting men and women who have discovered this fabulous fact.

One day last spring I traveled a couple of hundred miles by car with one of the most enthusiastic, vibrantly alive men I have encountered anywhere. The weather that day was curiously changeable, bringing warmth, cool breezes, varying clouds, showers and glorious sunshine in rapid alternation. The countryside was clothed in spring freshness. The road we were following undulated up hill and down dale.

At every turn my companion found some cause for delight. "What is more beautiful . . ." he asked, indicating the fields we passed, ". . . what is more beautiful than a flock of sheep in a green meadow like that?"

A few minutes later, marveling at long shafts of sunlight cutting down through heavy overcast, he exclaimed, "Looks like a light from heaven, doesn't it?"

And the next moment, with a wave of his hand in the direction of a handsome old brick house set amid stately pines: "Ah! There you have early America at its best!"

Noticing a little stream splashing down a hillside and under a little bridge, he remarked about the beauty of "clear, cold water surging over clean washed rocks."

Great dark clouds came billowing up from the horizon, and he drew a deep breath of rapture saying, "Just look at the rugged grandeur of that sky!"

At length we stopped for gasoline. I found myself wondering whether my exuberant friend would find anything to trigger his admiration at the rather ordinary-looking service station. Sure enough — along one wall of the building three lilac bushes stood covered with lovely blossoms.

Now, for me no flower has greater charm than the lilac. Each year I look forward to its springtime blooming. But never have I heard anyone become as ecstatic about a lilac bush as this amazingly zestful man.

"I have seldom met a man with as much enthusiasm as you have. How do you get it?" I asked.

"The springtime is so glorious!" he answered. "Guess I'm having my own springtime too — sort of a mental and spiritual springtime. I feel I have been reborn."

He went on to tell me of his new awareness and of how he had come to experience spiritual reality. He quoted St. Paul's great assertion in the epistle to the Romans: "We should walk in newness of life."

One byproduct of his new aliveness, he added, was that he now had much more confidence in his ability to cope with life's problems.

What happened to that man can happen to any of us. And for sure we need to "walk in newness of life" — because, in the natural course of events, to the extent we remain untouched by inspiration, the zest and enthusiasm of youth tends to abate as we grow older. Poets through the centuries have lamented this melancholy process:

*The youth, who daily farther from the east
Must travel, still is Nature's priest,
And by the vision splendid
Is on his way attended;
At length the man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.*

As we move into adulthood we tend to become preoccupied with life's difficulties and responsibilities. We easily lose sight of our early dreams. We get tense, anxious, weary. Things lose their sparkle. We may even grow listless and dull.

But by the power of faith operating in the mind a person can be renewed in such a way that one not only gains strength for dealing with difficulties, but finds life becomes endlessly scintillating, satisfying and exciting.

At Los Altos United

Modern traditionalist to L.B. pulpit

By Ralph Hinman Jr.

Exactly as old New England's sturdy virtues are recalled by Los Altos United Church's clearly simple Colonial architecture, so that East Long Beach parish's new minister suggests those early American parsons who helped create a civilization in the wilderness.

Which is not to say that John D. Westhaver Jr., who will be formally installed Sunday as LAUC minister, is old-fashioned. Far from it.

Presiding at Rev. Westhaver's installation Sunday at Los Altos United Church will be Rev. David M. Reed, senior pastor in Long Beach's historic First Congregational Church-United Church of Christ and chairman of the UCC's Orange Association church-and-ministry committee. Services begin at 4:30 p.m. and continue through a 5:45 p.m. congregational supper.

The 41-year-old cleric clearly is attuned to the realities of late-20th century life. In recent Air Force chaplaincies, for instance, he's been deeply, professionally involved in drug abuse counseling and other areas of contemporary concern.

But he is ordained in a church with roots deep in North American soil. Today's United Church of Christ was created by merger of three denominations of significant historic import: the Congregationalists of New England; the breakaway Christian Churches of both the South and New England and the Evangelical and Reformed churches, the latter of Continental-Swiss origin.

"I feel completely comfortable and at home in this setting," Westhaver said during a recent interview. To him, church union is of paramount importance.

Modernist though he clearly is, Westhaver believes that John Calvin, a great Protestant Reformation thinker, has validity for a modern age. "It only would be necessary to update him here or there."

One of the old Puritan divines Westhaver admires is Jonathan Edwards, a dissenter from a rigidity prevalent in the pre-Revolutionary War church and a leader in the "Great Awakening" that spurred American religious life before the war with Britain.

Chief among contemporary theological influences on his thinking were Howard Thurmond, a renowned preacher and teacher, and Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the Nazi-martyred German parson who taught a "church for the world."

Educated in Massachusetts — BA, Boston University, 1962, Master of Divinity, Andover-Newton Theological School (near Boston), 1966 — his speech retains more than a suggestion of Boston.

Westhaver, son of a trouble-shooting chief who traveled widely, first joined the Air Force following high school graduation in 1954. He served — as a Russian language analyst — in Tripoli, Turkey and Texas.

Accepted as a law student prior to graduating from Boston U. in the early 1960s, he heard a new call. Later, while attending Andover-Newton, he was a student minister and an associate, becoming pastor of First Congregational, Rindge, N.H., in 1965.

After becoming an Air Force chaplain in 1966, he served at Nellis AFB, Nev., and in Thailand. In the latter assignment he was involved with a nighttime ministry, religious education, counseling, drug abuse and racial problems.

Back in New Hampshire, at Pease AFB, he worked with youth, in teacher training drama and more counseling. During an Alaskan tour he held similar responsibilities.

Since divorced, a marital situation the Los Altos search committee found "not too unusual in the profiles we saw" of other contemporary ministers, he is the father of two children. They live with their mother in Rhode Island.

Lad Singers harmonize well— but Shannon steals the scene

By Bob Andrew
Staff Writer

One of the biggest causes of the continual turnover of personnel in a gospel quartet is the disruption of family life occasioned by the nearly incessant travel involved in this form of ministry.

For example, Mike Campbell sang lead for a year and a half with the Gospel Lads Quartet which appeared frequently on the "Gospel Fires" national television program when they were not on the road.

During that time Sue Campbell sat home, at first alone, later with their infant daughter, Shannon.

A few months after Shannon's birth, Sue decided to do something about the lack of family life, which is how the Lad Family Singers came to be born. She soon began traveling with Mike and another couple, taking Shannon along and, now four years later, finally adding her as a featured soloist for one number.

The other couple has recently dropped out of the Family Singers because their daughter reached school age, a new wrinkle on the same old problem.

Besides Mike and Sue, the Lad Family Singers now consist of Charles Burnett and bass guitarist Larry Dame. Burnett also is an expatriate of the Gospel Lads, having sung both the lead and tenor positions at various times.

Burnett and the Campbells displayed an unusual closeness of harmony for a mixed trio during the appearance Wednesday night at the North Bellflower Church of Christ, a feat made possible largely by the very low register of Sue's alto voice.

Many of the numbers were arranged with the three voices a third apart nearly all of the time. While such close harmony is fairly common in either male or female trios, it is rare to find a mixed trio with such a tight blend of vocal ranges.

At times the trio made use of contrast for emphasis by deliberately breaking into broader harmony with wider overtones to stress a particular word. This trait was particularly noted on one song in which the name "Jesus" seemed broader than a Scot's plaid while the phrases describing the various acts of God ("Who makes the wind to blow? Who makes the flowers grow?") were pin-stripe narrow.

Dame also sings during the concerts, but not anywhere near a microphone. He could clearly be seen singing quietly along, even during solos — Sue's included.

(No one noticed if Dame sang with Shannon, who is as cute as she is precocious. While she was singing about a little black sheep was no time to watch a guitar player. At four, Shannon is too young to be fairly judged as a singer, but her voice gives signs of eventually being as low as her mother's and even stronger.)

If there was a flaw in the concert it was because Sue's arms are too short. She also plays the piano (as well as composing at least one song and scoring the arrangements) which means that her microphone is quite near the piano. If her arms were longer she and the mike could be farther away from the instrument, thereby softening it.

Alternatively, she could remember that the instrument's name comes from the Italian pianoforte, and rely more on the first part of the word, soft, and less on the last, loud.

Unfortunately the concert at the North Bellflower church was scheduled virtually at the last minute as the Lad Family Singers made a stop over between dates in northern California and a recording session in Oklahoma. But Southern California will have another opportunity to hear the group — next May.

Concert aids council

A "Festival of Negro Spirituals" featuring a well-known Los Angeles choir will be sponsored here Nov. 20 by the Long Beach Area Council of Churches.

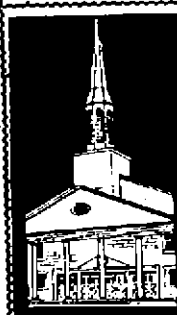

The Holman United Methodist Choir then will perform during the council's annual major fund-raising activity at 4 p.m. in First Congregational Church, 241 Cedar Ave.

The council is seeking advance gift-givers in various categories: Centurions, contributions of $100 or more; Patrons, $50-$99; Sponsors, $25-$49; and Donors, $24 or less.

Advance sponsors whose names are received by noon Monday at council offices will be listed on the concert program. For further information, phone 438-3350.

Organized in 1946, the Holman choir rose to fame under the baton of the late Earl Grant and its present director, Dr. David Bowick. With some 100 voices, the group is specially proficient in spirituals and concert selections.

Mozambique making headway as independent nation

By Michael T. Kaufman
New York Times Service

MAPUTU, Mozambique — In slightly more than two years of independence, this Marxist state seems to have succeeded where so many developing African nations have failed: Creating a sense of discipline without outwardly turning the country into an armed camp.

No one here suggests that a social paradise has been attained or that such a prospect is imminent. Certainly the revolution here has encountered enormous problems involving shortages of skilled manpower, goods and capital. And refugees arriving in Portugal have spoken bitterly of racism, indicriminate arrest and food shortages.

Bordered by both Rhodesia and South Africa, Mozambique has real enemies close at hand. Still, there is a widespread confidence that rests on the national mobilization and self-sacrifice and that is exceptional in the experiences of independent black Africa.

During a 3,000-mile tour that this correspondent just completed, the signs of social transformation and grass-roots involvement in development efforts appeared regularly.

Recently, for example, this large modern city was pummeled by a bizarre hailstorm. The early summer torpor of coastal southern Africa suddenly broke and cold, fierce winds whistled while balls of ice the size of lemons and tangerines fell in a barrage that killed four people and hospitalized hundreds.

Half an hour after the storm began it was over, and half an hour after that, groups of citizens were in the streets sweeping up the glass and fallen tree limbs and building barricades around downed electric wires. There were teams of neighbors, of high school students, of factory workers. The next day workers in industrial plants and commercial offices began donating a day's wages for a reconstruction fund. Within two days the debris had disappeared.

A young Mozambican, proud of the city's response, was drinking coffee at the luxurious Polana Hotel overlooking the Indian Ocean. "In two years of independence," he said, "we have had everything—floods, hail, an outbreak of bubonic plague and Rhodesian invasions. All that is missing is rivers of blood and the slaughter of the firstborn. But if these come, we can handle them also."

There are staggering problems, of course. A serious lack of trained people, particularly teachers, is frustrating economic development. Food occasionally rots in the countryside because there are no trucks to carry it to market. Some dissidents or people out of step with national mobilization are sent to re-education camps, which have been strongly criticized by refugees from Mozambique. And Rhodesian raiding parties seem able to enter the country at will, destroying settlements in retaliation for Mozambique's support for the guerrillas seeking to oust the white-dominated Rhodesian government.

THE GOVERNMENT'S approach to political dissent and personal freedom is governed by a paramount need for discipline. Members of Frelimo, the only party which led the 10-year war against Portugal and which has been transformed into a Marxist vanguard party, insist that free debate and discussion are encouraged at party meetings though no criticism is permitted outside.

Despite its difficulties, the government of Mozambique appears to have united the people and concentrated their energies in a way that is unusual for the third world and singular for Africa. Often the most impressive evidence lies in small details. In the deepest bush, men and women salute visitors with the raised arm gesture of Frelimo. Clearly these country people were proclaiming, "I am Mozambican," a show of national identity that is rare on a tribally fragmented continent.

On the banks of rivers, in addition to the usual team of women washing clothes, there were men washing clothes, something this reporter has not seen in 23 other African countries. Such activity seems to stem from government educational campaigns against polygamy and cultural forms of male sexual dominance.

AT A SMALL communal village a 12-year-old boy with two years of schooling stood before a blackboard teaching 45 elders, men and women, to read. At another new settlement residents showed off the neat four-room adobe and thatched houses they had built cooperatively in neat rows. Proudly they pointed to the outhouses behind each house, saying that the government had showed them how to build them and why they were needed.

In another region a team of paramedics was inoculating the population against smallpox, tetanus and tuberculosis. They were part of a campaign that began a year ago in which such teams set out at the northern border with Tanzania intending to work their way south, vaccinating everyone. So far, the Ministry of Health reports, more than three million of the population of 10 million have been treated.

A sign on many schools and public buildings throughout the country says, "Let us turn our whole nation into a school where we can learn from each other." So far, at least, the sentiment seems more than rhetoric.

IN NEIGHBORING Rhodesia it has long been an article of faith among white leaders that any transition to majority or black rule inevitably will lead to a white exodus that, in turn, will signal a speedy collapse of the country's complex technological structure.

White Rhodesians often paint pictures of plummeting production, vandalism and chaos as black masses take over from white masters in Zaire, for example.

When the Belgians left what was known as the Congo and a long period of political turmoil began, roads became overgrown by jungle, inventories were depleted and never replaced, factories ground to a halt. In another former Portuguese territory, Angola, where civil war continues, distribution systems faltered and elevators broke down, with no one to repair them.

Here in Mozambique, despite the departure of 250,000 Portuguese settlers—the people who ran industry, the civil service and the large plantations—nothing so drastic has happened. Phones, railroads and airlines work. Abandoned stores and factories are being run, admittedly at reduced levels of production, but run nevertheless by workers' committees with the aid of relatively few foreign experts.

THERE ARE many problems of distribution and cars and trucks are sorely needed, but there is no apparent hunger and the periodic shortages of things like beer and canned goods—hardly necessities for most of the rural population—are no worse than in many African states that have been independent for years.

Discussing the more negative side of the ledger, Joaquim Brum, director of the Ministry of Economic Planning concedes that there are awesome difficulties as the country embarks on a socialist course. With 70 percent of the population under age 18 and with illiteracy estimated at more than 90 percent, there is an overwhelming need for skilled people, not just doctors and engineers but mechanics and people who can drive cars.

The filling of such needs is the first priority of the government, and its first move was to nationalize education, which under the Portuguese was private and largely reserved for the children of settlers. Even though there are few teachers, primary education is obligatory and a school is often administered by a teen-ager, with higher-grade pupils teaching lower grades.

Another difficulty is that the Portuguese left behind them a highly capitalized and developed economic structure that is largely irrelevant to the needs of the people. There are factories that produce perfumes, but there are not enough textile plants and many people in the countryside wear rags.

China says Russ might invade

U.S. Yugo defense doubted

New York Times Service

VIENNA — Peking is gravely concerned about prospects in Yugoslavia and doubts the U.S. resolve to help defend that country if it were invaded by the Soviet Union, Chinese diplomats here say.

"It is quite possible that Soviet forces may try to enter Yugoslavia after Marshal Tito's death," a senior Chinese official told an American here. "This would be the acid test for East-West detente, the Western alliance, everything."

The official said China was worrying whether the United States would come to Yugoslavia's aid in the event of a Soviet takeover.

"We will help Yugoslavia," the Chinese official declared. "But we are far away and do not have sophisticated military equipment. We are convinced the Yugoslav peoples would fight an invader, but this may not be enough."

The Chinese added: "World War I started in Yugoslavia — in Sarajevo. I'm afraid there is the danger that a third world war may again originate in Yugoslavia."

The Chinese diplomat's remarks were characteristic of the current anxiety in Central and Eastern Europe about possible developments in Yugoslavia.

The present worries started when President Josip Tito began what was described as a period of rest, canceling all international commitments and public appearances.

The Chinese said that while Peking didn't regard the Communist parties of Yugoslavia, Italy, France and Spain as "real Marxist-Leninist," good relations with Belgrade "on the state level" were desirable.

The Chinese contended that the Western European Communist parties that are now being called "Eurocommunists" had all well-entrenched pro-Moscow factions and that their display of autonomy from the Soviet Union may be purely tactical.

"They all want to enter the government, and nobody knows what they would do after they attain power," the Chinese official remarked.

He went on: "The Italian, French and Spanish Communists may be useful if they help anti-Moscow dissidents in Eastern European countries, but on the whole I'd suggest that in my personal view Americans should be very cautious in dealing with the so-called Eurocommunists."

The Chinese diplomat stressed that Yugoslavia and its Communist movement had "an older and stronger tradition of independence from Moscow" than the Communist parties in Italy, France and Spain.

China's intellectuals 'back in front parlor'

TOKYO (AP) — After years in the doghouse, China's intellectuals have been brought back into the front parlor. They have been encouraged to conduct scientific research and read Shakespeare, and now they have been given pay raises.

Teachers, scientific and technical workers, medical workers and literary and art workers make up the majority of categories benefiting from salary increases effective Oct. 1.

The Chinese soon will have the long denied opportunity to enjoy once more the poems, essays, novels and masterpieces of writers who emerged after the 1919 literary renaissance. Most have been banned for political reasons in recent years.

In addition, state publishing authorities have announced new editions of classical literature, poetry, painting and music, from the sixth century onward, to be issued this year.

The state publishing house also is raising the window to let in foreign literature, music and art, including the works of Shakespeare, Heine, Gogol, Balzac and Hugo, stories of Greek mythology, the piano compositions of Beethoven, Chopin and Bach, and drawings of Rembrandt.

Only four years ago, Western composers were derided as bearers of rotten bourgeois culture. Until now no Western works of fiction have appeared on library or bookstore shelves, with the possible exception of those of Jack London and Mark Twain, both regarded as suitably progressive.

Hsinhua said the new trend is not liberalism in the Western sense but "a diversity of themes and forms."

Philadelphia turnaround key to Telling's rise to Sears top

By Lynn Litterine and Jack Severson
Knight News Service

Edward Telling has spent 31 years in the service of one master — nearly a third of a century toiling in the marketing vineyards of Sears, Roebuck and Co., the world's largest retailer.

This week Telling sipped Sears' finest vintage.

At a press conference in the 110-story Sears Tower corporate headquarters in Chicago, Edward R. Telling Jr., 58, was named to succeed Arthur M. Wood as chairman of the board and chief executive officer as of Feb. 1. Wood retires on that date at 65, Sears' mandatory retirement age.

Telling's elevation is due, in part, to his performance during his Telling's story is an up-from-the-ranks tale. He joined Sears in 1946 as a management trainee in the company's warehouse in his hometown of Danville, Ill. After managing several stores in the Midwest, he moved to head Sears' retail operation in New York in 1965 and, four years later, went to Philadelphia.

EDWARD TELLING
Due $166,500 raise

A spokesman at Sears' regional headquarters in St. Davids, Pa., remembers the vice president of the 12-state Eastern Zone as "a hard-nosed, down-to-the-basics type of individual."

Indeed, the business journal,

Forbes Magazine, earlier this year touted Telling for the chairman's post, describing him as "a very tough man—just what is needed to restore discipline."

A tough guy is just what Sears needed.

Three years ago, the chain discovered that it had upgraded its fashion image — and prices — so much that low-priced items, the kind that create customer traffic, were being ignored. Sears stores weren't stocking them and Sears customers were turning to discount stores.

So, in 1976, after serving as senior vice president of the Midwest Zone, Telling was appointed to Opened counter-attack on discount stores the newly created post of senior executive vice president for field operations.

In January, with Telling pushing hard, Sears launched a counter-attack on the discount stores by opening budget departments in their full-line stores.

The man called "tough" and "hard-nosed" was pushing his field, pushing the competition and pushing himself into Sears' top spot.

Telling pushes Telling hard, too. He drives his own car to work, arriving before 7 a.m. — and before most Sears employees.

And, his relatively simple lifestyle reflects his rise from the lower Sears ranks to Numero Uno — a ladder-climb the company prides itself on.

An opening at the top means promotions all up the line.

As a Sears spokesman put it: "We have a saying, 'When a guy is named chairman, Sears hires a stockpinner.'"

New Amex president 'ready'

NEW YORK (AP) — Brokerage executive Arthur Levitt Jr. says he is looking forward to Jan. 3 when he takes over as chairman of the American Stock Exchange, the nation's second-largest stock market.

"Professionally, I recognize that the challenges facing us are awesome," Levitt, 46, said in a statement after he was selected as Amex' next chairman and chief executive officer.

"But I welcome the opportunity to head a major organization whose activities will affect future markets in equities, options, commodities, and other financial instruments."

AFTER WEEKS of speculation, the exchange's Board of Governors chose Levitt, who has held the unsalaried title as Amex vice chairman for several months, and announced that he had accepted the job.

Levitt, the son of New York State's long-time comptroller, replaces Paul Kofron, who said last July he wouldn't seek renewal of his five-year contract when it expires Nov. 30.

As president of Shearson Hayden Stone Inc., a major brokerage house, Levitt earned $195,000 a year. He will be paid more than $200,000 under his five-year contract with the Amex.

a governor and vice chairman with... such projects as the ongoing expansion of the exchange trading facilities and its plans for relocation.

"With this background, his election will help insure a vigorous and orderly transition program for the Amex."

After the announcement, Levitt went down to the exchange floor, where he greeted and spoke with individual members for about 30 minutes.

A key problem facing Levitt is how the exchange will fit into the national market system envisioned by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Supporters say that under such a system, the nation's stock markets would compete more directly by offering the public the best securities prices.

THE AMEX traditionally has had almost to itself the market for stocks of listed but less-seasoned companies than those on the larger New York Stock Exchange.

But, faced with lagging volume in those issues, the exchange has diversified into other areas and has become embroiled in a bitter competitive battle over options trading with the Chicago Board Options Exchange.

And the SEC recently decided to open an investigation into the explosive growth of options trading.

Disneyland establishes record attendance mark

Business Wire

BURBANK — Walt Disney Productions Friday reported its 10th straight year and 11th straight fourth quarter of record revenues and net income.

Revenues for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 increased 8 percent to $629,825,000, while net income increased 10 percent to $81,947,000, or $2.57 per share.

E. Cardon Walker, president and chief executive officer, also reported that, for the fourth quarter ended Sept. 30, revenues increased 14 percent over last year's fourth quarter to a total of $205,197,000, while net income increased 21 percent to $31,978,000, or $1 per share.

INCREASED attendance, increased per capita spending, and effective cost controls in the company's theme parks were the primary reasons for the excellent performance in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1977, Walker said.

Attendance at Disneyland in California reached an all-time record of 10,678,000 during fiscal 1977, an increase of 4.6 percent over the prior year.

Stimulated by the opening of Space Mountain, Disneyland's fourth-quarter attendance increased 11 percent to a record 4,141,000. During the month of September, Disneyland attendance ran 27 percent ahead of the prior year.

Walt Disney World attendance during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1977 increased 7.4 percent to a record 4,236,000. Total attendance for the full fiscal year was 13,057,000, 0.4 percent behind the prior year.

Walt Disney World would most certainly have experienced another all-time record year during fiscal 1977 had it not been for the extreme cold weather experienced in the eastern United States during January and February of this year, Walker said.

Walker also said that operating income in the theme parks increased 42 percent over the prior year during the fourth quarter and 38 percent for the full year.

Simpler income tax forms due

By William Gruber
Chicago Tribune Service

CHICAGO — Jerome Kurtz, the new commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, insists this year's federal income-tax forms will be easier to understand and fill out than those earlier.

The 1978 forms were so complicated that Kurtz's predecessor, Donald C. Alexander, wrote an apology to taxpayers on the cover page of the IRS booklet.

But Kurtz, a Philadelphia tax lawyer named to the post by President Carter and sworn in on April 29, pointed out that the IRS "gets blamed for the complexity, but they merely reflect the laws."

"The 1040A short form, which about one-third of taxpayers use, will be much simpler than in the past," he said. "It has fewer lines, uses only one side of the paper, and has larger type."

"In fact, it is designed to encourage the taxpayers to have us compute their tax since it asks only for basic information such as the number of dependents and income figures."

THE LONGER 1040 form used by most taxpayers also has been "substantially revised into a more logical format," Kurtz said. "The items are listed sequentially instead of requiring the person to flip back and forth repeatedly from front to back."

This year's forms will be easier on the eyes, even if many people still may have trouble with their computations, he added. The short form will be printed on pink paper and the 1040 on blue paper. The 1976 forms used red and blue ink on white paper.

Kurtz, 46, said he always has prepared his own returns.

Noting his legal background, he added, "I would recommend that most people using the 1040 get some help — but maybe I shouldn't say that."

A native Philadelphian, Kurtz joined the law firm of Wolf, Block, Schorr and Solis-Cohen in 1955 after he graduated from Harvard Law School, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review. He graduated from Temple University in December, 1957. He returned to the firm and remained with it except for a leave from 1966 to 1968 to serve as tax legislative counsel for the Treasury Department.

Speaking at a tax conference sponsored by the University of Chicago Law School this week, Kurtz said he would like to see individual and corporate taxpayers stop "playing games" with the IRS in filing their returns.

"I don't view the tax system as a game," he said. "But some taxpayers try to bury questionable information, taking the attitude that, 'If you find it, we'll pay it.'"

Trojans' Ford knows the way to Pasadena

By Dave Wielenga
Staff Writer

SEATTLE — Dwight Ford, who came to USC with a reputation as a sprinter, is making a name for himself as a distance runner.

Well, that's speaking relatively. Ford isn't going to make anyone forget Frank Shorter, but after the exciting long runs he has produced this season — four of more than 53 yards — the reserve tailback has made certain that Trojan coach John Robinson won't overlook his presence on the bench.

"Once Dwight gets into the secondary he's not tackled very often," said Robinson, who wouldn't mind seeing Ford break another one today in the Trojans' 1:30 p.m. Rose Bowl elimination against Washington.

Four teams know that well — painfully well.

• Texas Christian received the first lesson in USC's home opener when Ford broke loose for a 70-yard touchdown run to boost the Trojans' lead to 44-0.

• Washington State was victimized a week later, Ford racing 53 yards to lift the Trojans to a 24-0 halftime advantage.

• California scored a victory of sorts when it stopped a 63-yard Ford run seven yards from the goal line. However, two plays later Lynn Cain scored from the four to tie the score at 7-7.

• Stanford almost had Ford stopped at the line of scrimmage last week, only to have him wiggle loose and streak 63 yards late in the third quarter to jump USC's advantage to 42-0.

"Once I get past the line of scrimmage I'm thinking touchdown," said Ford, who has tallied five TDs this season.

"When Dwight first came to USC he was unaggressive," offered Robinson. "I think that slowed his development. Now he has become a runner in the mold of Anthony Davis — he attacks, then bounces off and breaks away."

"I don't get a lot of chances so I try to make the most of them," Ford shrugged.

He has. Although he has carried the ball only 69 times, Ford is second to Charles White in team rushing with 558 yards — an 8.1 average. He has three 100-yard games this year, another in which he ran for 94, and his career average is 7.0 per carry.

"It is a team effort," Ford reminded. "While most people are watching the ball carrier, good blocks make a good run possible."

That usually means the linemen, but Ford maintains he is also indebted to the receivers.

"On the long runs it is usually the receivers who throw the vital blocks," he explained.

But Ford admitted that a certain degree of luck is also involved.

"I don't really know what I'm doing at the time," he said. "It's mostly instinct. People will tell me afterward, 'Hey, that was a beautiful run.' I just say, 'It was?'"

Robinson is also at a loss to explain Ford's long-distance runs.

"A year ago it was White who was breaking the long runs. Davis had most of his long ones as a sophomore. Maybe the rested player has an advantage, maybe it's the change of style in different running backs, maybe it's a psychological thing. It's really hard to say."

Millikan stalls last-minute Poly drive to gain CIF playoff berth

By Ken Pivernetz
Staff Writer

It took a successful conversion kick on the final night of the regular season to determine the Moore League's third CIF playoff representative.

Brain Scanlan's extra point was the difference for Millikan High as the Rams nipped Poly, 7-6, Friday night at Veterans Stadium.

The victory was worth second place and an opportunity to join Compton and Lakewood in the 16-team Coastal Conference playoffs next week.

Millikan, which hadn't beaten Poly since the Rams' 1973 championship season, got its touchdown on a one-yard sneak by quarterback Al Hawkins with 1:17 remaining in the second quarter.

The Rams marched 76 yards for their score following a 70-yard Poly drive that saw fullback Joe

(Only game scheduled)

Flowers score on a situation identical to Millikan's TD play—second down and goal from the one.

The second half, though devoid of scoring, produced an exciting windup.

Poly ran on Millikan for 156 yards; only the second time in eight games the Rams had allowed an opponent to go over the century mark on the ground.

The Jackrabbits also ran out of time.

They fumbled away one scoring opportunity at the Millikan 26 with 6:35 to play, then drove 67 yards from their 19 to the Ram 14 in the final 3:24 when the game ended.

Until Poly's late bid, Millikan appeared to have gained the upper hand in the second half on some nifty footwork by Hawkins off the option and on outside pitches to Fred Moore.

The Rams used nearly eight minutes on a drive that started at their 25 and had a third and 2 on the 11 when Poly defensive tackle Charles Ussery Jr. stripped Hawkins of the ball.

Millikan tackle Chris Harris recovered, but Hawkins, forced to pass on fourth down, threw incomplete.

Poly, which had only one first down in the second half at this point, then reeled off four in as many plays. They advanced from their 13 to the Millikan 26 on a scramble by Eston for 12, Richard Davis for 14, Marvin Lard for 14 and a fullback blast by Flowers for 21.

Lakers race past Jazz; Davis latest to join injury list

By Doug Ives
Staff Writer

On a night when they lost their fourth player with an injury, the Lakers exhibited plenty of spunk and raced to an easy 123-107 victory over the New Orleans Jazz Friday evening at the Forum.

Rookie guard Brad Davis was the latest to join the casualty list, following by one day veteran guard Don Chaney and two earlier victims, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Kenny Carr.

Davis broke the fourth metacarpel on the ring finger of his left hand, an injury which will sideline him for five weeks, but an injury which proved to be a blessing for Ernie DiGregorio, who now will win a place on the squad by default.

For a team to have three players with broken fingers or hands is unheard of in a game in which the legs usually go first. Abdul-Jabbar, who is expected to return on Friday, broke the same bone as Davis, except on his right hand. Jabbar's break occurred in the season opener. Chaney broke his thumb in practice on Thursday. Carr has a broken foot, suffered in the pre-season.

The Lakers have only 10 players on their roster, one less than the maximum. Chaney will be out two weeks and Carr another two or three.

None of the injured were missed Friday.

Reserve guard Lou Hudson led seven double-figure scorers with 24 points, including a dozen in the second period when the Lakers broke open the game, taking a 65-47 halftime lead.

Another sub, forward Tom Abernethy, enjoyed his finest game as a Laker, tying his career high in both points (19) and rebounds (12).

DiGregorio was on the bench, as usual, until Davis was hurt late in the second quarter. Ernie received a loud ovation from the 11,538 fans when he made his first appearance in the third period, and responded by handing off six assists in 17 minutes.

"I'm not frustrated by not playing," DiGregorio said. "I've gone through this kind of situation at Buffalo. All I can do is let the 49er Johnson: 'San Diego best we've played—but we can win'

By Jim McCormack
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—For Eddie Johnson, action speaks louder than words.

"I'm really not an assertive person," he says. "I think I'm more a doer than a talker."

A week ago, Johnson's actions spoke rather loudly. Trying to shield a shoulder that has been injured more times than he'd care to recount, Johnson played free safety for only the second time in his life and made 11 unassisted tackles.

It was to no avail. The 49ers lost to Fresno State, 23-14.

"I didn't feel badly about losing, though," Johnson says. "The next morning when I woke up, I knew we had lost, but I felt like we had won the way the defense had played."

Johnson would like to wake up Sunday, feeling the 49ers had won, and this time be supported by the scoreboard.

It's an imposing request, however. The 49ers are up to their hip pads in trouble with San Diego

EDDIE JOHNSON
Assertive 49er

Johnson. "But we can beat them if we get the same game we've been getting from our defensive line. Then it's just a matter of the secondary being able to contain the pass."

With San Diego's aerial armada of quarterback Joe Davis and wide receivers Ronnie Smith and Dennis Pearson, that's quite a challenge.

It can't, however, be any more of a challenge than merely playing has been for Johnson.

He missed six games of his junior year with a broken thumb and has been restricted by a battered left shoulder this season. The shoulder has been hammered so many times, in fact, it has been suggested that Johnson retire.

"There are only three more games, and I can make it through that. The shoulder is sore, but I'm not going to have any permanent damage, so I want to play," Johnson says. "This is it for me."

Johnson had to ice the shoulder into numbness to finish the Fresno game. On most occasions, he forgets the pain when the game begins.

"The adrenalin begins to flow, and you forget all about it."

"I love the competition, the feeling of going against another good athlete," he says. "It's all worth it."

Johnson transferred to Long Beach State from Monterey Peninsula College. He's a criminal justice major, and for the past three years he's returned to Monterey each summer to work with youngsters. Being an athlete, he feels, helps.

"It's really a positive aspect, it opens the door," Johnson says. "Underprivileged youngsters tend to lean toward sports, and being a football player makes it easier to relate to them."

One of the things Johnson teaches the youngsters is assertiveness.

"That's something you never stop learning, and one of the most important things to know is when to be assertive," says Johnson.

Johnson restricts his assertiveness to the football field, where opponents find it has quite an impact.

State, tonight's 7:30 opponent in San Diego Stadium. The contest can be heard on KKOP-FM (93.5).

"They're a very good football team, the best we've played," says

By Gary Rausch
Staff Writer

It's been a long time between starting assignments for UCLA quarterback Steve Bukich—three years and 10 days to be exact.

On Nov. 2, 1974 Bukich was literally and figuratively thrown to the dogs in Seattle. Junior John Sclarra had broken an ankle the previous week at California and sophomore Jeff Dankworth, the backup, suffered a severely sprained ankle in rehearsal.

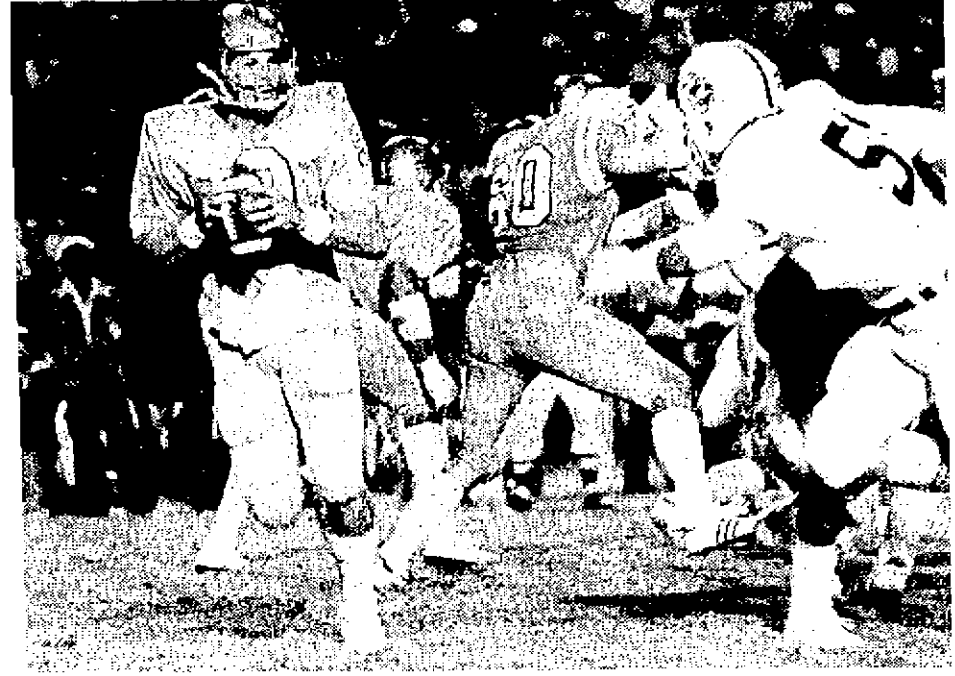

The fact that Bukich, a fuzzy-cheeked 17-year-old freshman, would be facing the Washington Huskies was the best-kept secret around Westwood in many seasons.

Playing all but two series that cold, dark afternoon in Husky Stadium, Bukich indelibly engraved his name in the Bruin record book with five interceptions, one shy of the Pacific-8 Conference standard. He threw five completions in 14 attempts and was sacked five times in a 31-9 defeat.

Steve redshirted the following season, missing the Rose Bowl, mopped up behind Dankworth last year, and has made only four appearances behind sophomore Rick Bashore this term.

While preparing for today's game with Oregon State (Coliseum, 1:30 p.m.), the junior from Newport Harbor High had occasion to recall his baptism under fire.

"My freshman year I didn't have a real good idea of what college football was all about," he said. "I didn't know what kind of performance I needed.

Game action photos of Steve Bukich are rare commodity this season

Now I know what it takes to get the job done.

"I have to take over and become a real leader of our offense. It's not the type of thing where I can turn into a leader for one week. I've been here three years and most of the players know what I can do. There won't be any big change on my part."

The situation today is far different than his debut. He is not without experience—51 passes, 61 rushes. But more importantly, he has been No. 2 for two seasons and his weekly preparation has paralleled the starter's.

"I've been getting just as much work as Rick in practice. The difference is that I haven't played. I've worked mostly with the No. 3 line and running backs. I've thrown to the same receivers for two years, so I have a good feel for the offense."

Bukich was expected to take charge last spring, but a rib injury caused him to miss half the workouts. Bashore was never challenged thereafter.

More noted for his passing than running, Steve has always appeared out of place in the Bruins' Veer offense. An inexperienced line and Bashore's inability to present an outside threat forced head coach Terry Donahue to abandon the option at mid-season in favor of a drop-back passing scheme. Such changes favor Bukich.

"We're using the pass rather than the option," said Steve. "The quarterbacks are not reading the line on options. We've already determined whether we'll keep the football or give it up. As for throwing, it makes it easier for me."

"It's not the Veer of the past. We're running power sweeps, quick pitches and traps. It's more of a multiple offense. We have a good dropback attack, but we need our sprint-out passes, too."

Bukich thought back to his first year and compared it to what freshman Michael Brant, his replacement, must be experiencing these days.

"It's tough on a freshman. It must be scary. Freshmen don't know how good the competition is. They might over-rate it. Having confidence in yourself lessens the pressure. It also determines good from great."

"I know I have the God-given ability to get the job done. My decision-making in a game is 100 percent improved over my first game, and my ball-handling is second nature to me now."

Laboring long hours each week has merited few rewards on Saturdays.

"It's been tough," the 6-2, 215-pounder admitted. "I thought someday the opportunity would come. This year I wasn't too sure. Things didn't look good. Instead of feeling sorry for myself, I did everything to prepare myself to play. Before the season started, I decided I'd just have to wait my turn. I've learned to keep a good attitude."

The Oregon State game shouldn't mean more than any other contest this season, but it does to Bukich.

"It's the pivotal game in my career. My opportunity has finally come. I'm practicing just like I have all season, but I'm concentrating more. Experience would be a definite advantage. I guess I'll have to cram nine weeks of game time into one game."

Thoughts of five interceptions at Washington in '74, the fumble at California last year or the interception at Minnesota this season are all but forgotten.

"I realize I've had other opportunities turn out badly, but I'm not going to look at each play and analyze each mistake. It's part of the game. They weren't the result of panic situations or extensive pressure, just things that happened."

"Each time I've planned how I wanted things to happen, nothing's worked out. Now I won't rely on that. I've got to go out and make things happen."

Opportunity has made the rounds and is knocking again on Steve Bukich's door.

IT'S A FORD—

"The only thing I'm worrying about is somebody catching me," stated Ford.

It's a big change from last year when the junior public administration major had only a frustrating past and an uncertain future to show for two seasons at USC.

He had enjoyed a sensational prep career at Bell High, where he broke all of Davis' L.A. City rushing records with 3,831 yards and 40 touchdowns. He was co-Player of the Year in his senior season.

But playing time at USC was scarce, and his adjustment was difficult.

"I knew it wasn't going to be easy, especially playing behind a guy who was a Heisman Trophy candidate," White said of his backup role to Ricky Bell. "But I also knew that I could play. I became discouraged when (then-USC coach John) McKay told me he was going to move someone else in front of me because I was not enthusiastic enough."

Ford was redshirted in 1976 after recovering slowly from spring knee surgery.

"I was disappointed," he said. "When Bell was hurt last season it might have been me who got the chance to fill in, instead of Charlie (White)."

"But it was good for me, too," he continued. "It gave me a chance to mature mentally. I could relax and get my head straight."

It apparently worked.

"All of the running backs are together," Ford said. "We cheer for one another and we are happy to see each other do well. That's the way a team has to be to succeed."

And despite USC's up-and-down season, success is still very much within the Trojans' reach, said Ford.

"Our goal is the Rose Bowl," he said. "USC is always winning and it will be ranked No. 1 now and then, but the important thing is always the Rose Bowl."

"We know how crucial today's game is," he said, "and we know Washington has a great team. But it's still 11 men on offense and 11 men on defense, and we have so much talent here that when our offense and defense are together I doubt if we can lose."

Trojans' better idea

USC's Dwight Ford hopes to find running room today at Seattle in Rose Bowl showdown against the Washington Huskies. The Trojans' junior tailback has reeled off 70, 53, 63 and 63 yards this season.

Michigan seeks to avenge '76 upset against Purdue today

Associated Press

The Purdue Boilermakers did a terrible thing last season—they beat mighty Michigan—and today is the day of reckoning.

When Purdue upset Michigan, 10-14, last year, the Wolverines were the nation's No. 1-ranked college football team. But the stunning reversal dropped them to No. 4 and they never got higher than second thereafter, finally finishing third after a 14-6 Rose Bowl loss to USC.

"When they ruin a perfect season for us, that's got to be on everybody's mind," says Michigan safety Jim Pickens.

Michigan is ranked No. 6 this time around. The current villain is Minnesota, which shocked the Wolverines—again ranked No. 1 at the time—a couple of weeks ago and hasn't won a game since.

Don't look for any changes at the top of the rankings today. No. 1-rated Texas entertains lowly (2-6) Texas Christian while runnerup Alabama hosts (3-5) Miami of Florida.

Michigan's quest for victory at Purdue goes deeper than just plain old-fashioned revenge. The Wolverines trail Ohio State by one game in the Big Ten race, and next week's showdown will decide the conference's Rose Bowl representative barring some dastardly upset this weekend.

However, Michigan will be up against a Purdue team—coached, by the way, by long-time Schembeler aide Jim Young—which has won three games in a row, its longest streak since 1972, and boasts one of the nation's leading passers in Mark Herrmann. The freshman sensation has completed 155 of 275 for 2,215 yards and 17 touchdowns.

but also has thrown 21 interceptions.

Notre Dame, No. 5 in the ratings but No. 1 in the hearts of the Cotton, Sugar and Orange Bowls, faces what coach Dan Devine says "could well be our toughest test of all" in Clemson Memorial Stadium, known as "Death Valley" for good reason.

"It will be a real challenge to play at Clemson against such an improved team," Devine adds. "Their defense is outstanding."

LBCC, Pasadena to be firing tonight; Vikes' finale

By Jim Mangan
Staff Writer

When Long Beach City College tries to end its season on a positive note tonight against Pasadena, spectators should have little trouble keeping track of the fogball.

It will be in the air.

The Metropolitan Conference game is at 7:30 in Veterans Stadium.

Pasadena quarterback Sheldon Paris put the ball in the air 40 times last week in his team's 28-17 win over El Camino.

He hit on 23 attempts for 319 yards and four touchdowns.

At the same time, LBCC's Samoa Samoa was 11-of-23 for 275 yards and four scoring strikes as the Vikings beat Pierce, 50-15.

Not surprisingly, five Pasadena and three Long Beach receivers—Brian Fulbright, Hank Workman and Henry Williams—are listed among the Metro's top 10.

Tonight's game is the last of the year for the Vikings, who draw a bye next week when the seven-team league winds up the season.

A win over Pasadena would leave Marty Shaughnessy's squad with a 7-2 over-all record, best in a dozen years.

What a 4-2 Metro mark would mean to LBCC, now fourth in the Metro, will not be known until the conclusion of the season next week, but a tie for first is within reach.

Before that, of course, Long Beach must handle Pasadena—no small accomplishment.

The visitors will be trying to hold onto the conference lead which they share with Valley and Bakersfield, all 3-1.

In addition to its aerial game—Paris leads the Metro with a 200.1 game average and 18 scoring passes—Pasadena has the leading rusher in James DeCuir, 83.9 yards per game, and the stingiest defense, 204.8.

The Lancers sacked El Camino quarterbacks 12 times last week, a figure which should keep Samoa on his toes.

Shaughnessy says Pasadena should be favored because "they have a better defense and they don't make as many mistakes as we do."

But, he adds, his players may have more motivation because "we want to restore some of the confidence people had in us."

It could be quite a game.

Petition filed to deny FCC license to KCET

Declaring that "public broadcasting in Los Angeles is public in name only," five local organizations have filed a petition to deny the license of KCET Channel 28 with the Federal Communications Commission.

Court rejects bid to upset ad exempt rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Appeals Court refused Friday to upset a Federal Communications Commission rule exempting most radio and television commercials from the fairness doctrine.

The exemption was for broadcast advertisements where no controversial issues of public importance were involved.

The appellate court said it does not believe the FCC acted "arbitrarily or that it abused its discretion" in withdrawing most commercial advertisements from application of the doctrine.

The FCC ruling had been challenged by the Committee for Open Media, a consumer organization, and other groups and individuals.

The court said counter-advertising merely challenging the accuracy of ads or the desirability of standard products is different from such FCC decisions as those requiring the granting of air time to dispute cigarette ads before they were barred from the air waves several years ago.

Reasons cited were that the station "is a closed book" that does not provide the public with information about its financial and policy-making practices. The petition criticized the station's "quasi-commercial production of national programs at the expense of coverage of local public affairs" and charged that its board of directors "is neither representative nor responsive to the public."

It asked the FCC to grant a preliminary hearing on the allegations. Signatories to the petition included the California Public Broadcasting Forum, the Campaign Against Utility Service Exploitation, the Committee for Children's Television, the L.A. Women's Coalition for Better Broadcasting and the California Friends of Better Broadcasting.

KCET's management said the station has 30 days to file its response and would do so within that period.

Cauldron of political scandals boils in O.C.

By Bob Sanders
Staff Writer

In its own unusual way, Orange County is maintaining a reputation for political scandal and chicanery. Since the enactment of the Political Reform Act of 1974, a total of 42 political figures have been either indicted or convicted on fraud charges.

Soon after the law was passed, Rep. Andrew Hinshaw, former county assessor, was indicted and later convicted of political fraud in connection with his campaign for Congress. He is now awaiting sentence.

He was followed, in quick order, by County Assessor Jack Valleria, Supervisor Robert Batlin and the politically prominent Dr. Louis Cella, who was billed as California's largest political contributor in 1971.

Along with them went some 32 assorted aides, elected officials, government employees and political figures who have either been indicted or convicted.

Judge bars supervisor prosecution by DA

The only setback Orange County District Attorney Cecil Hicks appears to have suffered so far in his efforts to put political figures in jail occurred this week when a Superior Court judge disqualified his office in the prosecution of two county supervisors.

The supervisors, Ralph Diedrich and Philip Anthony, were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury last June on multiple charges of covering up certain contributions to Anthony's campaigns for office in the 1976 election.

Four other persons, including Anaheim City Councilman William Kott, were also indicted.

The charges involve some $65,000 of Anthony's $280,000 total campaign spending that the district attorney maintains was "laundered" through various other people to conceal its real sources, which were Diedrich and a loan broker named William Conrad.

Conrad, as well as an attorney who worked for Diedrich, Michael Remington, and a Calabasas jeweler, Martin Kirschner, also were charged with a variety of violations in the 28-count indictment.

Remington and Kirschner have pleaded guilty and have been fined and placed on three years' probation. Kirschner was fined $5,000 and Remington $15,000.

The supervisors, however, petitioned Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab to disqualify Hicks from prosecuting them on the basis that Hicks was biased against them because of a series of past run-ins.

In 1975, the supervisors attempted to remove 21 investigators from Hicks' office and put them under the sheriff's department. In August of this year, Diedrich walked out of a budget hearing, refusing to vote on Hicks' $6.4 million budget.

Hicks went to court on the investigators' transfer and won. His budget was approved without Diedrich's vote.

After considering the bias charges for three days, Judge Schwab agreed with the supervisors and disqualified Hicks' office from prosecuting them.

District attorney's spokesmen say it is the first time in the history of the county that the office has been prevented from prosecuting a case. Hicks is not commenting.

The matter is further complicated by the fact that the state attorney general's office, which logically would prosecute the case if the district attorney didn't, already has refused the case and a representative from that office testified in favor of Hicks at the hearing.

Judge Schwab has set a hearing on the matter for Nov. 21 and ordered the district attorney and the attorney general to have representatives there to help decide how to proceed.

It would seem that that would be enough political turmoil for one county—but it doesn't seem to be for Orange County.

While all this is going on, another supervisor has been accused of falsifying Whatever happened to ... Melvin?

Peorian hit fancy of Marines

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

Whatever happened to Melvin Miller?

You recall Melvin, the 40-year-old tractor factory foreman, teetotaler, elder of the Presbyterian church and pillar of his community of Peoria, Ill.?

Good Ol' Mel, as he came to be known to thousands of Southlanders back in 1960, plunged from the heights of anonymity to the depths of notoriety as the butt of one the greatest gags ever carried off by the Marines.

An overnight sensation 17 years ago, Miller slipped quickly from the limelight. Today, he is a senior material control manager with a Caterpillar-owned company in Ohio who spends much of his time flying around the world.

His life has changed, but he still recalls fondly the night it all began.

GRANT MAXWELL, bartender at the Press Club on Pine Avenue in Long Beach, distinctly remembers Melvin Miller.

"A remarkable thing," Maxwell recalled. "It just snowballed. Melvin Miller was the nicest guy in the world—and it was all Joe Geston's fault. Blame it on Joe Geston."

Maxwell was co-owner at the time of the Sandpiper Bar in Laguna Beach, a favorite haunt for unattached, hot-dog, live-for-today Marine jet pilots from El Toro Air Station.

According to Maxwell, the Melvin Miller story started when one of the bar's regulars, Capt. Joe Geston, couldn't remember where he parked his car on Labor Day, 1959.

"He lurched in yelling that his car was missing," Maxwell recounted. "Somebody suggested, 'Maybe it's in Peoria!'"

"Considering the condition he was in, Geston thought this was indeed possible, but he didn't know anybody in Peoria. Someone else suggested, 'Why don't you call Melvin, oh ... Miller. Yeah, call Melvin Miller.'"

"So Joe called Peoria, Ill., and told the operator he wanted Melvin Miller," Maxwell recounted. "Woke this poor fellow up at four in the morning and asked him if he'd seen his car. The guy in Peoria apparently felt sorry for Joe. He even looked outside."

Geston managed to find his car the next day and called Miller back to tell him the good news, Maxwell went on. The incident might have ended there, but Geston and his buddies had other ideas.

FOR THE NEXT year, whenever the Marines descended on the Sandpiper, somebody would call "Good Ol' Mel in Peoria" and tell him his troubles.

"Usually it was Joe Geston," Maxwell said, "and he would pour his heart out. When he got tired of talking, he'd put one of his buddies on the line. They talked to Miller, chatted with his wife and got to know his three kids."

Between Labor Day and Christmas, 1959, Miller received more than 50 calls from Marines in the Sandpiper Bar. When the Millers became skeptical—thinking their callers were really idling

Melvin Miller cautiously stepped off the plane into one of the craziest episodes in California history and everyone got into the act. Laguna Beach officially declared "Melvin Miller Week." Other Southland communities quickly followed suit.

"Remarkably enough," Maxwell went on, "Melvin Miller may have had the last laugh. He didn't drink! Isn't that a touch of irony?"

in some Peoria oasis — Geston sent post cards from California and enlisted his buddies to send a bushel basket of Christmas cards and gifts from all over the world.

But it didn't end then, either, Maxwell recalled.

"The pilots decided to repay Miller's good humor — and patience — so we took up a collection to bring him out to California for the party to end all parties in the Sandpiper. Somebody donated a 5-inch artillery shell casing and we put it right up on the bar."

Another in a Saturday update series about persons and events that once made news and what has happened since.

Must have collected more than $1,000.

When Geston excitedly called Miller to tell him about the expenses-paid trip, Miller begged off, explaining he'd already taken his vacation and couldn't get away.

"That Geston!" Miller recalled. "He called up my boss and before I knew it, they had plane reservations made for me to leave O'Hare Airport in Chicago."

The story got out to the newspapers and before Miller knew it, the Marines had lined up a seven-day schedule fit for a king. He was met at Los Angeles International Airport by a band and motored, including four chartered buses carrying 300 sign-carrying well-wishers who turned the airport into chaos.

Introduced as "the greatest unknown in the history of Peoria," he threw out the first ball for a Dodgers-Giants game where it was officially proclaimed "Melvin Miller Day with the Dodgers."

In Tijuana, the crowd screamed "Viva! Mel-veen Mee-lahr!" The bull jumped out of the ring.

Miller was taken to Del Mar race track for the running of the first annual Melvin Miller Slakes, then to the Sandpiper, followed by a tour of the Hollywood movie lots and lunch with Jayne Mansfield, then back to the Sandpiper, on to the bullfights in Tijuana, and finally — the Sandpiper.

"Every publicity agent in the country tried to cash in on Melvin Miller," Maxwell went on. "A delivery boy showed up one day with a heavy box and no return address. Inside were 1,000 records. We put one on the jukebox and it began:

"Melvin Miller, welcome to Laguna Beach ..."

"It was terrible and we gave them all away. Some guy called up and said he had to talk to Melvin. Urgent. Wanted to sell him a gold mine in Alaska."

Knowing a good thing when they saw it, Miller's employer extended his vacation an extra week and flew his wife to California. They lived, they were hosted and toasted and then, it was all over. They'd had enough.

MELVIN AND SALLY Miller woke up one morning and quietly caught a plane back to Peoria. Since then, Melvin has moved up in the Caterpillar company and suffered through personal tragedy.

"I was transferred to Brazil for four years in 1963," he said the other day on the phone from Minter, Ohio. "My last contact with those guys was in 1967 when someone called to say the Sandpiper had caught fire."

"In 1967 I went to Milwaukee, and a year later to Cleveland. Since then, I've been back to Brazil, over to England, around the United States, all on company business."

"It keeps me busy, but I've also had some bad luck."

He quietly explained that both his wife and a son died in 1972. His surviving two children have married "and I even have a grandson. How about that?"

He has remarried and lives quietly in South Euclid, Ohio. And yes, Melvin Miller now has an occasional beer.

Parties in Norwalk face sound barrier

By Tim Burt
Staff Writer

An ordinance that would allow sheriff's deputies to measure noise levels of loud parties after warning the party-givers will be considered Monday night by the Norwalk City Council.

The existing ordinance notes that persons are prohibited from making "any loud, unnecessary or unusual noise which either annoys or disturbs" the peace and quiet of those in the city.

But it does not set specific noise levels which are prohibited.

Fred Roos, director of public works, said his staff is recommending that the council approve the revised ordinance and authorize purchase of a $600 sound meter.

After hearing complaints, deputies would first ask the persons to quiet down.

If the noise continued, deputies would use the sound meter to determine whether the party-goers had exceeded the permitted noise level.

Deputies could arrest the persons giving the party if a violation were found.

The exact noise level that constitutes a violation would be determined by the City Council. Three readings would be taken by deputies at two-minute intervals.

"We have no intentions of putting people in jail for giving parties," said J.L. Cline, commander of the Norwalk sheriff's substation. "The ordinance is just an additional tool to help us control the noise."

Master plan workshop slated by L.B. Harbor Department

The Long Beach Harbor Department's proposed port master plan will be presented for public discussion at a workshop Tuesday, Nov. 22.

Harbor Department staff members will summarize the plan, and Dr. Robert Whalen of the Army Corps of Engineers Waterways Experiment Station in Vicksburg, Miss., will present a summary of hydraulic model studies of San Pedro Bay.

An open discussion will follow to receive audience comment.

"Before proceeding to prepare a complete draft master plan for submittal to the Coastal Commission as required, we want to review the plan with all interested persons," explained Dr. Donald B. Bright, director of commerce.

The workshop is to begin at 9:30 a.m. in the sixth floor commission meeting room in the department administration building, 925 Harbor Plaza.

'14th Ambassador' Anaheim woman will represent Disneyland

Raelen Lescault, a twenty-two-year-old brown-eyed brunette from Anaheim, was chosen Disneyland's 14th Ambassador to the World in colorful ceremonies Friday.

Motion picture star Sandy Duncan announced Miss Lescault's selection from the field of four finalists in front of the park's Sleeping Beauty Castle.

The new ambassador was born in Weizburg, Germany, where her father was stationed with the U.S. Army, and is a graduate of Villa Park High School.

She is now attending Cal Poly at Pomona, majoring in architecture and behavioral sciences, and plans to earn a master's degree in business administration.

As the 1978 ambassador, Miss Lescault will travel throughout the United States and numerous foreign countries to promote Disneyland and the Magic Kingdom, and will serve as official hostess to dignitaries visiting the Anaheim park.

Miss Lescault has been employed at the park since 1973, starting as a salesperson on Main Street and becoming a tour guide in 1976.

RAELEN LESCAULT smiles and hugs her mother, Mrs. Raymond Lescault, after the 22-year-old Cal Poly student was named Disneyland's 14th Ambassador to the World in ceremonies at the park Friday.

$1.5 million in stolen gems dug up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About $1.5 million worth of gems stolen from a San Francisco gem dealer in Seattle Oct. 24 were dug up by the FBI in the Berkeley hills Friday.

The recovery of 70 percent of the $2 million in jewels was disclosed by U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell at a news conference.

Charles R. McKinnon, special FBI agent in charge, declined to pinpoint the area where the gems were found other than "not a very inhabited area."

He did not say whether there would be any additional arrests besides the five made on Oct. 28. The four men and a woman — all residents of San Francisco or Oakland — have pleaded innocent to charges of receiving and concealing stolen property in interstate commerce.

The FBI chief wouldn't say how agents learned of the stones' location.

An excited gem dealer Victor Nash arrived at the same time newsmen were ushered in to view the dirt-encrusted treasure.

He identified the gems and said the find included some valuable pieces such as carved opal and jade.

When the case was broken, the FBI thought all of the jewelry was recovered but Nash later said it was only about 10 percent or $200,000 worth.

He said the gems were buried about two feet deep and were loose — although some were wrapped in paper. He said agents carefully dug in the area and found the missing loot at "two locations close together."

"We dug completely around the area and are certain there are no more there," said McKinnon.

Agents brought back two garbage cans with dirt they were going to sift through in search of any more precious stones.

"Even though it's hard to tell with the dirt, this is a big part of my stock," said Nash. "There are emeralds, sapphires, lots of jade, some fine amethysts, jade bracelets and several hundred gold mountings and an opal carving which is worth around $7,000."

"I hope to get them back soon," he went on. "I want to say God bless the FBI... I'm delighted."

Nash said anyone who would throw stones into loose dirt must have done so "in a panic."

He was robbed at gunpoint in a motel parking lot as he was leaving for a Seattle store to display his wares.

An undercover FBI agent arrested two of the defendants Oct. 28 after arranging to buy the $200,000 worth of gems for $60,000 in San Francisco. The other three defendants were arrested a short time later.

A sixth person was arrested on a criminal complaint, but was released when the federal grand jury failed to indict him.

Those charged were Gene Welsler, 45; Marvin Melvin Morrow, 41; Joe Willie Perry, 33; Robert Andrew Glover, 29, and Cynthia Tobin Case.

Raymond Leroy Short was freed after charges against him were dismissed.

Bell had flown into San Francisco just a couple of hours earlier to attend the swearing in ceremony for newly appointed U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter and for a speech today.

Bradley seen 'best bet' to be first black governor of Calif.

Associated Press

LI. Gov. Mervyn Dymally, the first black to hold that post, said Friday he thinks Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley has the best chance of becoming California's first black governor.

In addition, the outspoken Dymally predicted that Gov. Brown may win the presidency in 1984.

Dymally speculated that Brown would win re-election next year, then run for and win Republican Sen. S.I. Hayakawa's seat in 1982 before being elected President in 1984.

Brown is unbeatable next year in the gubernatorial race, Dymally said, because "he's as popular now as (former Republican Gov.) Ronald Reagan ever was. He perceives the public mood better than anybody else."

But Dymally said Brown may be more apprehensive about Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis than any other Republican challenger. "The chief makes good press copy and people see him as a tough cop, if intolerant," Dymally said.

The lieutenant governor said Bradley would probably retire in 1981 after his second term and be elected governor in 1982.

As for himself, Dymally predicted he might run for Congress if Rep. Augustus Hawkins retires.

Ward urges drive for a national initiative

By Noel Swann
From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisor Baxter Ward has urged the public to pressure other supervisors into supporting his drive for a national initiative process.

"At a news conference Friday, Ward asked the public to prevail, in particular, on Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, saying Hahn's vote is crucial if Ward is to get the national initiative issue on the Los Angeles County ballot next June.

Ward's aim is to have a ballot issue in the June election asking local residents whether they would favor a plan under which national issues and laws can be changed by way of the initiative process.

If local voters supported the issue, Ward's next step would be to pressure county and state congressional delegates into calling for a constitutional amendment to allow for the use of initiatives on the national ballot.

As he sees it, an issue could go on the national ballot with a given number of signatures from voters in a relatively small number of states.

Ward expressed chagrin that he got no support for the plan from other supervisors when he raised the issue earlier this week. While the other supervisors remained silent, Ward said he was particularly distressed at the fact that Hahn spoke out against the plan.

Noting that Hahn refused to change his position after a subsequent private meeting, Ward said "I now have to lobby with the people. Mr. Hahn's vote is crucial. He historically supports issues that are in the public interest, and if he doesn't, those issues frequently die."

Hahn said Ward's proposal would simply bog down the ballot, that it would not get the support of Congress, and that the initiative process was not needed with the country's system of checks and balances.

Hahn noted that federal legislators would hardly be willing to support an initiative process taking away their right to legislate.

Ward, however, said he believes the initiative process is vitally needed because of high income taxes and welfare costs. "The American people must wrest control of their federal government before it spends us to death and destroys our way of life," he said.

Ward's motion earlier this week was referred for study by legal and constitutional experts as well as educational authorities. A report from the various sources was requested in 60 days, but Ward said that was too long a period to wait.

"Something has to be done immediately," Ward added.

Traffic fines 'pocketed' by court aides?

An embezzlement operation among employees of the Compton Judicial District may have been in operation as long as a year, according to municipal court administrative officer Raymond A. Ballantine.

Los Angeles deputy District Attorney Leonard Blake has confirmed his office is investigating the possibility that one or more judicial employees pocketed up to $25,000 in fines paid to the district.

Ballantine said that at last count, the district was missing 400 cash payments made by persons for whom arrest warrants were issued after they failed to pay bail on traffic citations.

Payment of the fine cancels the arrest warrant and the citation.

The missing payments, of $65.50 each, were discovered after a court clerk noticed that a form to recall several arrest warrants for persons who had paid their fines showed her name as the person who typed the form.

"But she said she didn't," Ballantine said. "So we tried to find the court file on those particular citations and they were missing. Gone."

Court employees contacted some of the persons who had paid cash fines to the district, and discovered their receipts were not authentic, he added.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday: Your birthday today. You will find the year extremely significant in terms of psychological changes. Your life situation, however, remains relatively unchanged, and in many cases, this steadfastness brings unexpected problems. Today's natives have little regard for rules but abide by them to avoid trouble.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): This is one day in which you cannot expect anything for free. Take the long view of whatever you encounter, to avert rash errors.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Put in a serious performance without expecting much approval. Line up a health care program or get back on the one already started.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Expect odd reactions to any self-expression. Leave the boss alone today. If you are the boss, do not skip from one deal to another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stay with time-tested formulas now. Be thrifty, postpone buying. Wait and see what your loved ones would like before making up surprises for them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is difficult to see the resistance from all sides in true perspective — it's not of your making, and going to change. Your reaction to it is important.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get an early start on tasks you had bypassed previously. Expect no favors, not even a compliment. Most important, wait until asked before offering suggestions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Little can be done about people in authority; but you may be called upon to mediate conflicts with no prospect of reward. This evening give yourself a rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): With resistance all around you, there is no option but to do the very best you can. If you are in between jobs, take a holiday from job-hunting. Figure out what you really like to do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are expected to use your own resources although older people may be of some help. Press forward on any creative venture. Expect a hectic tomorrow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business is business and your personal life should be all yours; today these do not meet in comfort. You do a better job of the personal ventures, of course.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unfinished work, particularly research, demands your effort. Fact is essential at this time. Mate's insights can be very helpful; ask.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Whatever you've skipped comes back to haunt you today. No squawking. You'll be glad later.
